

British Vessel Is Driven Back While Trying To Rescue Nuns

Ship Riddled by Gun-fire From Undetermined Source

OFFICER IS KILLED

Sailor and Several Passengers Reported Wounded

Nanking—(AP)—The skeleton United States embassy here today warned its nationals it may be necessary to quit the city on short notice, perhaps tomorrow, and take refuge aboard the American gunboat Panay.

Chinese army officers admitted Japanese columns driving on Nanking were not more than 60 miles away. (Japanese reported capture of Tanyang, only 45 miles from Nanking.)

The Chinese military worked feverishly to prepare the capital, evacuated by its government, for a fight to the finish. All women, children and old men were being removed from villages within a radius of 20 miles to the east and south.

Shanghai—(AP)—The British steamer Siushan was reported today riddled with bullets from an undetermined source while on a mission of mercy to Japanese-occupied Tungming island, near Shanghai.

The chief Chinese officer was killed. A sailor and several passengers were wounded.

After more than 200 machine-gun shots had been fired, the little steamer's master, Captain N. Mc Miller, kept on his hands and knees under the spray of bullets to the wheelhouse. He reached the wheel and steered his vessel out of range.

British authorities have been striving to rescue nine French Canadian nuns who have been marooned on the island for about three months.

Rescue Efforts Foiled

Among those aboard the 296-ton Siushan were the Rev. Father Adrien Sansoucy, a French Canadian missionary, and E. B. Boothby, a British consular official. Boothby sought to rescue the isolated nuns but his efforts were frustrated by the machine-gunning.

British authorities said the Japanese, who have an air base on Tungming island, were informed of the voyage in advance.

(Tungming island is in the mouth of the Yangtze estuary, between Shanghai and the China sea.)

Japanese today demanded freedom to enter Shanghai's International Settlement at will after their armed forces twice encountered foreign resistance.

Japanese Demand

At the same time a representative of General Iwane Matsui, the Japanese commander, demanded that settlement police prevent any repetition of the "victory march" attack on Japanese soldiers.

After a grenade thrower had scattered a column of 6,000 Japanese soldiers on parade yesterday, a United States marine officer's protest forced a Japanese cordon out of the area guarded by American troops.

Earlier today French authorities blocked five Japanese army trucks from the French concession but finally permitted them to move supplies into the French area.

General Matsui's representative reserved the right to take all necessary steps to avoid any recurrence of violence unless precautions by settlement authorities were satisfactory.

Declaring the Japanese army regards settlement police as incapable of effectively suppressing anti-Japanism, he also reserved the right to take any steps—including examination of persons and search of property—against hostile agitators.

The head of the International Settlement police accepted the memorandum containing Japan's demands, without committing himself. He explained it was necessary to pass it along to the council.

As soon as the council took official cognizance of it, informed quarters understood, the demands would be presented to the consular body for action. It was expected they would be transmitted to Washington and other capitals.

Major Decisions Probable Monday At Court Session

U. S. Bond Interest Payments, Utilities Valuation are Issues

Washington—(AP)—The supreme court met today to prepare for a busy session Monday at which opinions may be delivered on subjects ranging from payments of interest on government bonds to valuation of public utilities.

Outstanding cases among the 31 awaiting decision Monday or later involve:

1. Whether the treasury must pay interest on its gold bonds that were called for redemption in advance of the maturity date. Payment was sought by Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, the estate of the late James J. Ransom of Des Moines, and Arthur Machen of Baltimore.

2. A request by the Roosevelt administration that a historic "prudent investment" basis rather than a "fair present market price" or what frequently is termed a "reproduction cost" basis be used hereafter in valuing public utilities for rate-making purposes. Directly at issue was an order by the California Railroad commission directing the Pacific Gas and Electric company to reduce its gas rates.

3. The right of the department of justice to proceed in the Southern ew York Federal district court with its anti-trust dissolution suit against the Aluminum Company of America. The Aluminum company contends any proceedings should be brought in the federal district court at Pittsburgh, scene of similar litigation in 1912.

4. A ruling on whether the 1934 communications act prohibits use in federal criminal proceedings of evidence obtained by wire-tapping. The government used such evidence in obtaining conviction of four men on a charge of smuggling alcohol into New York.

Poland Also Is Seeking Colonies

Wants Outlet for Emigration and Source of Raw Materials

Warsaw—(AP)—A round of diplomatic talks today between French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos and Polish statesmen was generally expected by political observers to make clear to France that Poland, after Germany, is an applicant for colonies.

The need of an outlet for Polish emigration and a source of raw materials had been pointed out by the press a few days before Delbos arrived to solidify France's alliances with the Warsaw government.

Authoritative French and Polish sources said difficulties developed before Delbos' talks with Polish leaders actually had begun. The French insisted that Poland's troubled relations with Czechoslovakia must be included in any discussion of means of pacifying Europe. The reply was that Poland was accustomed to iron out her difficulties with her neighbors alone.

Two Aviators Perish When Planes Crash

Machines Fall Within Seconds of Each Other In Miami Race

CAUSE IS MYSTERY

Officials Seek Withdrawal Of Wittman as Result Of Tragedies

Associated Press Aviation Editor Miami, Fla.—(AP)—Two fire-blackened patches of debris formed mute epitaphs today for two of the country's most daring air race pilots as Miami's annual air show entered its second day.

The deaths late yesterday of Rudy Kling, Lemont, Ill., and Frank Haines, Detroit, in accidents singular in the annals of American airplane racing, actuated a move to obtain withdrawal of a third pilot from remaining competition here.

Of the three crack riders of tiny, temperamental and exceptionally speedy machines entered, only S. J. Wittman, Oshkosh, Wis., remained, and the contest committee planned to ask the erasure of his name from the list of competitors.

Only stock model airplanes, 75 to 100 miles an hour slower than the special racing ships of Wittman, Kling and Haines, would remain to fly for the prize money and trophies offered by the show, the All-American Air Maneuvers.

Wittman Wins Race

Wittman won the race in which his brother flyers were killed. His average speed was 243.84 miles an hour and his closest stock model competitor had an average of 159.93. The contest committee was represented as feeling that Wittman had too decided an advantage for the remainder of the program to remain in competition.

What killed Haines and Kling, the latter rated as air race pilot No. 1 by virtue of his money earnings at the National Air Races in Cleveland last September, probably will remain a mystery.

Versions varied, but it was agreed that both pilots struck the ground at tremendous speed within seconds of each other at the first or "scatter" pylon at the north end of a tight, triangular, five-mile course. Both at 100 feet.

Kling apparently dug in first and Haines successfully rounding the turn at the Illinois may have just met death, plummeted to destruction 150 yards farther on, his mount viciously out of control. Neither man appeared to have more than 100 feet of altitude at the time.

Rail birds surmised that Kling lost flying speed on the turn and Haines' machine, caught in Kling's turbulent propeller wash, had wrenched itself from the control of its owner.

The wreckage of the two little ships was burned later by field attendants.

Today's program was devoted to further closed-course events, augmented by stunt flying, aerobatics and precision work by navy planes.

Effinger Ready to Fight Extradition

Black Legion Commander Returns After Being Missing 15 Months

Lima, Ohio—(AP)—Virgil H. "Bert" Effinger, accused commander of the Black Legion who walked out of an extradition hearing at Columbus and was unheard of for 15 months, was back home today, ready to battle in court his return to Michigan to face charges of criminal syndicalism and possession of explosives.

The portly one-time electrical contractor surfaced at his home suddenly and dramatically yesterday, without indicating where he had been, as the climax to a lengthy search that extended through several states.

An hour after his arrest, Effinger was freed under $1,000 bond by Common Pleas Judge E. E. Everett, who set hearing of a habeas corpus writ for next Friday morning.

Judge Everett also granted an injunction restraining law enforcement officers from arresting Effinger on charges similar to those contained in the warrants upon which he was held today.

The hearing will offer, Effinger's Attorney Clarence C. Miller told the court, the first test of a new Ohio statute under which the legality of an extradition warrant may be examined. Miller said "out of town witnesses" would be called for the hearing.

Peace Efforts Of Labor Heads Are Fruitless

Lewis and Green End Meetings Without Reaching Agreement

NO TRUCE IN SIGHT

Observers Pessimistic but Still Hope for Solution

Washington—(AP)—Negotiations for a complete reunion of organized labor's rival factions neared collapse today after John L. Lewis and William Green failed to reach an understanding in two days of conferences.

The two leaders of 7,000,000 organized workers, ending their face-to-face peace meeting last night, announced they had made no agreement and did not expect to meet again.

They will report on Dec. 21 to the full peace committee of three American Federation of Labor representatives and 10 CIO delegates.

It was a sudden end to the conversations that began Thursday with fanfare and excitement.

Peace Prospects Dim

Although many observers were pessimistic, they said the last chance for peace was not gone.

Green and Lewis left the conference rooms separately. Lewis, his gray slouch hat yanked down over his eyes, said there were no conclusions and no recommendations to report to the full committee.

Green, asked about the outcome of the conference, told interviewers to draw their own conclusions.

From persons close to the two labor leaders it was learned the conferees had made progress insofar as they weeded out many subordinate issues and complaints which had hampered the negotiations.

The big stumbling block, however, continued to be the issue of dual unionism—the rival network of industrial unions which Lewis has organized since 1935 in fields where the A. F. of L. already had a foothold with craft unions.

Situation Unchanged

Handling the stalemate problem back to the full committee, Lewis said, left the situation in status quo with no condition it was in when he and Green agreed to talk it over.

Confronting the 13 members of the full negotiating committee will be the choice of revitalizing the sagging reunion plan or throwing it out altogether.

The full committees have discussed peace terms intermittently for five weeks without getting a basis for an agreement.

Oral Confession Evidence at Trial

Judge Admits Statement Despite Objections By Defense

Milwaukee—(AP)—The oral confession of Michael Kalamyer, one of four Chicagoans charged with the murder of a Milwaukee policeman in a gunfight following an attempted dairy burglary, was admitted in evidence in the quartet's trial today.

Police accused Kalamyer of being the man who killed Acting Detective George Raabe when Police surprised burglars in the Luick Dairy company plant Nov. 2.

Testifying for the state, Detective John McGarvey said that after Kalamyer, seriously wounded, underwent an operation for removal of a bullet, he told Kalamyer the missile had come from Raabe's gun.

"Yes, and he shot me in the belly, too," McGarvey said Kalamyer responded. "But he shot me first. We met on the stairs and exchanged volleys. He kept on coming and he kept on shooting. Then he fell. I jumped over him and ran a block to my car and went to Ninth and Wells."

Defeat for Defense

The defense fought desperately to keep McGarvey's story from the jury and noted an exception for the court record when Circuit Judge Robert S. Cowie ruled:

"I see no reason why the jury should not hear this testimony."

On trial with Kalamyer are Fred W. Young, Patrick Connolly and Charles Carney.

Kalamyer's purported confession was related yesterday by McGarvey—the jury trying the first degree murder case having first been exonerated at the insistence of Julius Reznik, counsel for Kalamyer.

Detectives Edward Diederich and Elmer Kahn were with him at the time of the alleged statements, McGarvey said.

Schubert Urges Federal O. K. for Plants' Purchase

Deal Would be 'Mutually Advantageous,' He Tells Commission

Washington—(AP)—William E. Schubert, general manager of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company, told the federal power commission today his concern's purchase of two hydro-electric plants from the Northern Paper Mills would be "mutually advantageous."

The utility, a subsidiary of the North American company, asked commission approval of the purchase. It proposes to pay 2,350,000 for the plants, located on the Menominee river near Amberg, Wis., and for a transmission line from the plants to Amberg and Green Bay, Wis.

The paper mill, Schubert testified at a hearing before Examiner Carroll B. Spencer, is able to use the power from the two plants only irregularly, whereas the Wisconsin Michigan company could make full use of it.

Schubert said some of the power would be transmitted to the Wisconsin Public Service corporation at Green Bay for resale.

The Wisconsin Michigan Power company for ten years purchased all the output of the Chalk Hill plant, one of the two involved, and part of the power from the nearby

Consul at Bilbao to Return to America

Washington—(AP)—Secretary Hull said today that William E. Chapman, American consul at Bilbao, Spain, has been given a leave of absence to return to the United States because insurgent authorities are obstructing his return to duty at his post.

Hull indicated no more efforts to reopen the consulate in Bilbao will be made until the military representatives of Generalissimo Francisco change their attitude.

They are understood to have demanded that Chapman return to Bilbao as a diplomatic representative, as well as a consular officer. The assumption here is that insurgent authorities would consider such a move a tacit recognition by this government of the Franco insurgent regime of Spain.

Secretary Hull made it clear, however, that this is not the intention of the United States.

Over $40,000 Taken in Theft of 11 Mail Bags

New York—(AP)—Theft of 11 bags of mail from a United States mail truck Thursday night was disclosed by post office inspectors today after five of the looked sacks had been fished out of the East river.

J. J. Doran, inspector in charge, estimated the value of the missing mail at between $40,000 and $50,000, of which only about $10,000 would be negotiable.

Physicians Fight Strange Disease Which Killed 10 Babies in Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—Physicians and scientists waged a concerted fight today against a strange disease that has caused the death of 10 babies and imperiled the lives of eight others during the last 11 days.

All of the tiny victims were in the infants' ward of St. Elizabeth's hospital. The disease, which killed most of the babies within 24 hours, was characterized by violent inflammation of the small intestines and was diagnosed as enteritis, or acute epidemic diarrhea.

The outbreak, confined to St. Elizabeth's hospital, began Nov. 22. Four babies died before the symptoms were fully recognized. The hospital immediately declined new obstetrical cases and isolated the other infants, but six succumbed and eight others were stricken. All of the later were in serious condition.

The victims ranged in age from 9 days to 24 days. Seven of them were girls.

Autopsies performed on the last two babies to die disclosed both had the same infection. In one, however, marked changes in the brain which apparently had occurred just before death led bacteriologists to believe that the disease is caused by a virus or germ.

Dr. Herman Bundesen, president of the board of health, said there was no known defense against the infection, that it strikes without warning and that its rate of mortality was about 50 per cent. The only recourse, he said, was isolation.

Dr. Bundesen said the disease may be "a very virulent ultra-microscopic filtrable virus," and added "no one seems to know what causes it."

Utah Senator in Severe Criticism On Farm Measure

Filled With Illegal Provisions, He Maintains

Signed Own 'Death Warrant,' Former Red Official Says

Paris—(AP)—Alexander Barmine, former first secretary of the soviet legation at Athens, said today he had signed his "death warrant" by resigning from the Russian diplomatic service and denouncing Moscow's recent "purge" of alleged enemies of the state.

Barmine, now in Paris, was said to have been in government service and a member of the communist party for 19 years.

His statement, issued through the central committee of the League for Rights of Man, declared that a "reactionary dictatorship" had led to the execution of all the old bolsheviks. He continued:

"I have signed my death warrant and exposed myself to the attacks of paid killers. I hope my act shows public opinion the true character of the regime which denies all socialism and all humanity."

Barmine was on sick leave in France when he decided to resign, renounce diplomatic immunity and join the host of political refugees in this country.

The soviet embassy declined to comment.

House Tax Group For Six Changes In Revenue Laws

Would Plug 'Loopholes' And Simplify Administration

Washington—(AP)—A house tax subcommittee tentatively agreed today to six changes in the revenue laws designed, Chairman Vinson (D-Ky.) said, to plug existing "loopholes" and simplify administration.

Vinson said the proposed changes would affect the government's income to some extent but that the committee did not have estimates as to how much.

The proposed changes would:

1—Permit business firms to deduct from taxable income a fixed percentage for attorneys' fees and other collection costs of sums included in their gross revenue but which are "not in the usual course of business of the taxpayer."

As an example, Vinson said, up to 50 per cent of the amount recovered in a lawsuit could be deducted for costs.

2—Tax dividends received from paid-up insurance policies. (There would be no tax, however, on dividends from insurance policies which are not paid-up.)

Closes "Loophole"

3—Allow corporations to deduct contributions for charitable, religious, scientific, educational or literary purposes only in the year they are paid. Under existing law they can be deducted when the commitment is made.

"This change might be interpreted as closing a loophole," Vinson said, "because there might arise an instance where the deduction is taken and the contribution never actually paid."

4—Forbid corporate contributions being included in deductions for business expense.

5—Limit deductions by individuals for gifts to those made to American institutions.

6—Fix the value for tax purposes of gifts in kind—where property rather than its value is transferred—at the time of the donor or its market value at the time of the gift, whichever is higher.

Under existing law, Vinson explained, the taxpayer can deduct either the original cost or the market value, whichever is highest. In that way the government never gets the benefit of a capital gains tax.

Durand, Wis.—(AP)—Two children were burned to death and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orin Synder, seriously injured today when a can of kerosene placed on a kitchen range exploded.

Residents of Zion Have Referendum on Films and Bowling

Zion, Ill.—(AP)—Movies and bowling, long banned as "agencies of evil," were issues in Zion's referendum today.

Those forms of diversion, along with smoking, pool playing, and drinking, were classed as harmful influences when Dr. John Alexander Bowie and his religious flock founded the city as a bulwark against wickedness.

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of the Zion Catholic church, and one-time dictator of the city, warned the faithful they would "live to shed bitter tears" if they voted to legalize movies.

Voliva, who controlled city affairs for 23 years and persists in a belief that the world is flat, said he had no objection to movies "if they are shown by a Christian man," but opposed their operation by those "who know only one God, the almighty dollar."

He also sanctioned bowling if the games were opened with prayer, and if liquor, tobacco, gambling and profanity were prohibited. The game, he said, "is simply rolling a ball to see how many wooden men can be knocked down."

Leaves to Start Land Sale Probe In Forest County

Assistant Attorney General Will Investigate Charges

Madison—(7)—Assistant Attorney General Joseph Messerschmidt left for Crandon today to investigate charges of an irregular sale of Forest county lands which brought about the suspension yesterday of District Attorney Francis W. Horne. Governor LaFollette removed Horne from office after a committee of five persons from Crandon told him about reports that two Forest county citizens, including a member of the county board, made a profit of $21,000 in a questionable deal.

The governor designated Attorney General Orland S. Loomis as district attorney and Loomis appointed Messerschmidt to make an investigation.

Assisted by an auditor of the state tax commission, Messerschmidt will interview all persons involved in the controversy and will make a full report to Loomis. The attorney general said this report will determine whether any criminal or other proceedings will be instituted.

Committee Named
The committee which consulted the governor was named at a mass meeting of citizens at Crandon last Tuesday. They asked for a special prosecutor on the claim that Horne had been negligent.

The land sale was disclosed by an audit of the county's books made by the state tax commission's accounting division. The audit produced charges that the two persons involved in the deal bought tax delinquent land for $125 an acre, obtained the tax titles without making any payment to the county, and sold the land to the federal government the same day for $180 an acre.

The audit was reported to the county board. The governor was advised that a resolution was presented to the board asking approval of the sale, but lost on a tie vote.

Now Spelvin Has Ideas About Private Papers

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York—The income tax reviewer called on George Spelvin, American, today, to go over his return for 1936, examine his private papers and ask some questions about his dreams and his personal life and met a strange rebuttal.

"Nothing doing," Mr. Spelvin said. "Absolutely nothing doing." "Now don't be like that," the reviewer said. "It's the law and you will only make trouble for yourself." "Absolutely nothing doing," Mr. Spelvin insisted. "I am sore."

"What are you sore about?" the reviewer asked. "I'm sore about this—where did you get that $5?" "What did you do with that four-bits?" when Jimmy Roosevelt and the boss himself and Henry Morgenthau get special treatment."

"But they have to pay income tax," the reviewer said. "Yes, and so do I," said Mr. Spelvin, "and I have paid it, but now you want to take up my time asking a lot of questions that are none of your business, and fight some night and spill a lot of gossip about me? And, moreover, I don't like the way they acted down in Washington when they were coming a lot of other people but refused to go into Jimmy's return or the president's or Henry's. That Republican congressman said he had trust-worthy reports that Jimmy made a big income selling insurance to people who wanted to stay in right with the administration, but when he wanted to put an expert to work on Jimmy's returns, the way you want to pry into mine, the committee said, 'nothing doing.' Well, all right, nothing doing on his or the president's or Henry's, nothing doing on mine, I'm like Popeye. I'll do anything they do."

"But, for gossakes," the reviewer said, "Henry Morgenthau is my boss. Can you picture me going in and acting like that with the secretary of the treasury?" "Can't Tell Where You're Going to Turn up a Laugh?" "Henry ain't my boss," said Mr. Spelvin. "I only know the committee refused to let an expert like you go over Henry's returns, the same as the experts went over other people's after Ham Fish challenged him. It's one thing to throw down a lot of papers like an inventory of the Pennsylvania railroad and say, 'There it is. Help yourself, chum,' but it's something else to turn loose an expert to see what the figures mean. Henry said people had established losses by exchanging stocks, and he said this was unethical. And the record says Ham Fish charged before the committee that Henry did it himself before the law was changed. Well, did he or didn't he? Why not let an expert decide? What is the reason for all this bashfulness? Brother, I'm bashful myself."

"But surely you don't think there's anything funny about the president's returns," the reviewer said.

"Well, what makes you guys always think mine are so funny, then?" Mr. Spelvin demanded. "You seem to get a lot of laughs out of me. Well, I've got the same kind of a sense of humor, and I want a couple of laughs. You can't ever tell where you are going to turn up a laugh."

Relations Board Within Rights in Editorial Probe

Lawrence Says Investigation Doesn't Infringe on Freedom of Press

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—On the surface it looks as if the National Labor Relations board has infringed on the freedom of the press—the right to criticize board action—but actually the case that has developed the newest phase of the controversy is based on an altogether different point and one that will bear examination because it goes to the root of employer-employee relations.

It's the true labor board ordered a magazine editor to appear before a trial examiner and bring books and records and it's the true editor had written an article criticizing the board. The purpose of the subpoena, however, was not to discuss the merit of the article, but its distribution.

The labor board recognizes full well that it has no right to tell editors what to say or to scold them for their criticisms and nowhere does it appear that the board assumed any such right. The board, on the other hand, draws no distinction between the written word and the spoken word if such words are used by the employer to intimidate his employees. Actually, the dismissal of the employees was held to be the "unfair labor practice" and was cited as tending to prove that hostility existed between the employer and the union which happened to be the company that worked in his plant.

The assumption of the board has been that the act of distribution of the literature was in itself harmless unless coupled with overt or secret attempts of other kinds to coerce, or intimidate or influence workmen in their bargaining rights. But the board does feel that its law is broad enough to compel an editor, or writer, or business manager or anybody else connected with a magazine or newspaper to furnish testimony as to what part, if any, was played by the employer who happens to have a labor dispute. Thus, it will not be damaging to the magazine editor to tell whether or not reprints of his articles were sent of his own free will to the Weirton employees, but it would be damaging to the cause of the Weirton company if it were testified that the literature was ordered to be distributed in reprint form by the steel company.

The question probably will go to the courts for decision because a magazine editor might take the position that where he wants to circulate his magazine or reprints is his business, fully protected under the free constitution freedom of the press, and that his list of subscribers or his promotion of circulation is his own affair and not subject to inquiry by any federal agency.

The legal problem is, however, not a simple one because the courts have ruled in certain types of cases that information furnished by the press when sought in criminal cases, though, to be sure, information as to the source or origin of news has usually been exempted from federal court inquisition. State courts have striven to compel disclosure of the source of news, but the decisions have varied as to the extent to which freedom of the press is impaired by such attempts.

Speeches Considered
There have been cases before the labor board in which, for instance, an employer made a speech to his workmen in which he frankly pointed out the disadvantages of union membership even though conceding that the workmen had a right to choose for themselves whether they wanted to join. Had the incident stopped at that point there would have been no action taken by the labor board, but later

Set Compass for Life, Lawrentians are Told

Young people must "set their inner personal compass for the travels and hazards of life just as truly as a mariner sailing a vessel near an unfamiliar coast," Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel at the University of Chicago, told students of Lawrence college at convocation yesterday morning.

College students should regard their advanced education as a means of bettering their character and taste and widening their interests and not as a way to earn more money later on, the dean said.

"Sometimes in life we have to turn our backs on familiar landmarks and go out into strange territory," Dr. Gilkey said. "This is especially true at college graduation time and then is when the accuracy of a personal compass will prove itself."

Sweet Corn Crop One of Largest In State History

Increased Acreage Yields 41,300 Tons During Season

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — A record sweet corn crop, consisting of 24,300 acres, 41 per cent greater than the Wisconsin 1936 acreage, which yielded approximately 41,300 tons of corn was reported today by the state and national canners' associations and the state and federal crop reporting service.

While the state corn crop is one of the largest in history, other canning crops did not fare so well in 1937, it was reported. County figures are not yet available, the service explained.

Wisconsin's sweet corn acreage in 1936 amounted to 17,200 acres and the production was nearly 26,000 tons. Canners reported that 1,137,860 standard cases of sweet corn were canned in the state in 1937 compared with 593,220 a year ago. The 1937 corn pack is the largest reported by canners since 1925 when 1,148,000 cases were canned, the service explained.

Demand for canned vegetables has increased greatly in recent years, mainly because of changed living conditions due to increases in urban population, experts explain. It is expected that because of successful experiments with new varieties and hybrids, Wisconsin's corn crop will be greatly increased in future years.

Wisconsin's farmers have taken advantage of the changing conditions by devoting more of their crop land for production of crops for canning, it was pointed out. The state has for many years been a leader in the production of peas for canning and cabbage for kraut.

Reports of Appleton's business and industrial districts are not complete and Kaukauna, Seymour, Black Creek, Hortonville and Combined Locks are yet to be heard from in the county.

Memberships fees and donations are still being accepted at the local office as an increased amount of money will be needed in 1938 to finance an increase in dental service. The office is open from 10 to 12 o'clock each morning and from 2 to 5 o'clock each afternoon.

Former New London Man Has Difficult State Job

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Of the 12,000 jobs in the service of the Wisconsin state government, probably few are more difficult than that held for the past 10 months by a former Waupaca county school teacher and bandmaster, Alfred C. Schumann.

For Schumann, since January of this year, has been administrative head of the beverage tax division of Sol Levitan's state treasury department, a division which since its creation with the repeal of prohibition, has been a paradise for patronage hunters under both the administrations of Governor A. G. Schmedeman and Governor Philip F. LaFollette.

Schumann is a prominent Progressive lieutenant who a few years back taught school in New London, was principal of the junior high school there, and organized the first high school band in the central Wisconsin.

WPA Personnel Director
More recently he has been personnel director of the Wisconsin division of the WPA, and administrative assistant to Martin W. Torkelson, until recently Wisconsin WPA head.

When Sol Levitan moved into the state treasurer's office last January, proteges of former Treasurer Robert K. Henry in the beverage tax division, especially the executives, promptly got the axe, and Schumann was drafted as administrator.

Since then he has grappled with the problem of trying to persuade hundreds of "deserving" party followers that there isn't a place for all of them in his office. Most notable of the job holders who now work under him is Fred R. Zimmernann, once governor and once standard bearer of LaFollette liberalism in Wisconsin, who is now an auditor in Schumann's office.

Civil Service
Although he didn't say so, it is safe to assume that Schumann was more relieved than anyone when the legislature a few months ago decided that the civil service principle in public administration is just as applicable in the collection of state beer and liquor taxes as in any other department of government.

Since then examinations have been held, and Schumann, along with his 100 odd subordinates, is now waiting the verdict of the bureau of personnel, for 40 other aspirants were the examination for the job of supervisor, which is the new title for his office.

That Schumann's job is a responsible one is attested by the fact that his agents collect each month approximately $30,000 in beer and liquor taxes, which after deduction of administrative expenses, about $200,000 a year, is turned back to local governments for the reduction of real estate taxes.

That he enjoys his job is proven by the fact that he is very anxious to keep it, although there are recurrent rumors in capital circles that a few persons of the Progressive high command are not overly anxious to see him emerge at the top of the list of applicants in the civil service test.

Estimates Between 10,000 and 11,000 Deer Shot in State

Madison — Chief Warden Barney Devine of the state conservation department estimated Friday that between 10,000 and 11,000 deer were killed during the three-day season ending last Sunday.

He also estimated that about 75,000 deer hunting permits were issued.

Department records for last year's 7-day season showed 97,000 licenses were sold and between 22,000 and 25,000 deer were killed, Devine said.

He explained his estimates for this year were based on conversations with members of his staff and a comparison with 1936 figures. Definite reports will not be made by hunters and license distributors for several months.

Devine estimated that "not more than 300 doe and fawn were illegally killed." The figure, he said, included about 40 animals struck by automobiles during the last month and was a "fine record" compared with last year.

The bear kill in 19 counties where hunting was permitted was comparatively small, he said, adding that he had heard of less than a half dozen being killed.

Trailer Aids in Keeping Maternal Death Rate Low

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — A health education project which is unique in the United States, the state board of health's maternity trailer, has completed a successful season, according to Dr. Amy Louise Hunter, head of the bureau of maternal and child welfare of the board.

The trailer may be used as an illustration of the reason why Wisconsin has the lowest maternity death rate in the United States and ranks about 41 other states in infant mortality.

Cold weather recently drove indoors the maternity trailer, which, with a trained staff aboard, and equipped with health literature and exhibits, covered about one half of Wisconsin's rural counties during a six month season.

Give Health Information
The trailer will travel again next year, bringing maternal and child health information to the remotest parts of the state, stopping at crossroads settlements and country schoolhouses with a message of medical science which would not have reached there otherwise.

The trailer, which recently was stored away for the winter after a six months season, was conceived

The Dog Owner and His Dog

By Allan Kerr

When Christmas time rolls around, which means puppy time in hundreds of homes where youngsters have reached the age to accept responsibility for the care of a canine playmate, we sort of wish that we might join these various family circles for a few weeks and lend a hand. For really, it's fun to select and train a brand new puppy.

There are going to be many mistakes made in dozens of homes, especially where dog owning is a pleasure that has never before been experienced. Fathers and mothers who have listened to the woeful experiences of trials and tribulations related by neighbors and friends, are immediately creating mental hazards to successful puppy raising that are often difficult to surmount. These hazards are usually placed in the way of prospective dog owners by persons who were influenced by similar misinformation when they themselves had determined to purchase and raise a puppy.

Use Common Sense
It is better, we believe, to sift most street-corner advice very carefully, and that which you wish to use should be mixed very thoroughly with plenty of good old-fashioned common sense. Not that those who give it are unreliable and inexperienced; quite the contrary is often the case, but, like the advice given for our many apparent ills, it is apt to be each one's own pet idea and they vary so greatly that the mixture is likely to be very, very confusing.

Why not study a good dog book? Many of them are inexpensive, some of them may be had free of charge at your dog food dealer, and most public libraries carry excellent works on dogs. A good veterinarian is also a reliable source of dependable information.

Old friends of this column have long ago become used to our harping on the pure-bred dog question. New readers might just as well be introduced to these opinions right now, while we are on the Christmas puppy subject. Please understand that we have no "home to pick" with the mongrel dog. Many of them make intelligent and loyal pets. We will, however, argue with their prospective owners, who, we believe, have the future relations among dogs and humans in their hands. They will help mold public opinion.

Buying the Pup
Let us suppose that you stop at a farm house to buy a pup. You pick out the liveliest one, provided that it is marked the way you wish and has good bone and conformation. The mother is a beautiful creature, apparently well bred. The father? We-e-l-l, they aren't exactly sure just who, what or where he is, but they are quite positive that he must be a very fine dog. You pick either a male or female, depending on your personal preference. Both have excellent qualities to recommend them. The price is $2.

Home in the small apartment, everyone admires the fluffy, handsome little animal. To be sure, his legs are a bit long and his feet are huge, but that just makes his antics much more comical. You're sure that you really have something there, and the pup and the kids become the greatest of pals immediately.

The little fellow eats like a horse and grows; boy, how he grows. At the age of six months he has almost reached the size of a small shetland pony. He has done more damage to the home furnishings than the two youngsters put together. In fact, he has become a little more than a nuisance. The children love him. What to do?

We must leave room in the paper for Clara Huxson's fine column, so this discussion will be continued next week. Are you going to the dog club meeting at Neenah, Dec 9? See you there.

Appleton to Get Over One Million In 1938 Tax Levy

$22 Rate Will Bring in $994,670; Special Taxes to Net $57,545

Appleton's total income from taxes in 1938 will be $1,052,215.81 including real estate, personal property and special taxes, according to Carl J. Becher, city clerk, who yesterday completed computation of the 1938 tax roll.

City Treasurer Joseph A. Kox is working on the tax bills and will have them ready for distribution by the end of December.

In addition to the tax levy of $994,670.61 on personal property and real estate, the city will receive $57,545.21 in special assessments. The largest part of the $57,545.21 will come from returns on street oiling, weed cutting, paving, storm and sanitary sewer installation, street grading, installation of ornamental lights, construction of new sidewalks, snow removal and water main installation.

All receipts from other sources will total $427,759 including returns from the power company, telephone company, income tax, liquor tax, state mileage tax, rental from city buildings, municipal court fees and fines and highway maintenance.

Other special taxes include the occupational tax on bees, $1.45, a new tax on the occupational tax on grains, $9.80, and the delinquent water bills, $268.12.

St. Nicholas Will Make Annual Check On Good Children

Children who have not been on their best behavior and are napping Santa Claus won't forget them as St. Nicholas makes his annual check-up. He is slated to visit homes Sunday night and to the children he finds behaving themselves he will leave candy and nuts as a reminder of more and better gifts to come later in the month.

St. Nicholas, an early bishop of Myra, in Lycia, Asia Minor, is a popular saint in the Roman and Greek churches. His feast day, falling Dec. 6, was once elaborately celebrated in English public schools, the solemnities continuing to Dec. 29.

It has long been a custom in certain European countries to keep St. Nicholas' eve by placing gifts in the shoes or stockings of children. This custom has been transferred to Christmas eve and the transformed saint is known as Santa Claus from the Dutch Saint Nicolaas.

However, many families in the United States still observe the European custom with children getting candy and nuts as a reminder to be good in order to be properly rewarded at Christmas.

White Rapids plant, but the contract expired last June and has not been renewed.

The Wisconsin Public Service commission already has approved the proposed purchase. Approval of the Michigan Utility commission also will be necessary.

Harry Gouchenauer, chief engineer of the Northern Paper Mills, Green Bay, Wis., told the commission the proposed price for the plants was about $1,400,000 less than they cost to build.

They were built in 1926 at a cost of $3,750,000 he testified. Gouchenauer said the paper mills planned to use $750,000 of the proceeds to build a new steam plant at Green Bay, Wis., to provide its current requirements as a by-product of its paper mill operations. He said construction of the plant would give employment to 200 men for five months.

The balance of the purchase price will be used to retire outstanding bonds, Gouchenauer said.

Ralph E. Moody, vice president of the Wisconsin Michigan company, said his company planned to issue $2,000,000 of a present series of 33 per cent bonds to an insurance company and $700,000 in notes to finance the purchase. He said the difference between the purchase price and the security issues would be used as working capital.

He testified the Wisconsin and Michigan commissions already have approved the proposed security issues and that a contract had been signed with an unidentified insurance company to take the entire amount.

taxes. But a house ways and means subcommittee, surveying the whole tax structure, did not expect to have a bill ready before January.

Budget-balancing — Mr. Roosevelt's message asking a slash in federal contributions now exceeding $200,000,000 annually spoke of "the necessity" of taking steps to balance the budget. Senator Harrison, veteran Mississippi Democrat, promptly said there was "no possibility" of its approval.

Secretary Morgenthau, who had designated highways, public works, unemployment relief and agriculture as territory in which "a great saving" could be made, indicated there would be no immediate bulge in federal spending of a "pump priming" nature by confining the treasury's December financing to refunding and tax anticipation borrowing. Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC told a New York audience that the budget "probably can be" balanced next year "if we can get business started again and people back to work . . . but not otherwise."

Series of Confabs
Government-business cooperation — President Roosevelt, in addition to utility conferences, projected his housing message "a series of conferences with representatives of industry, labor and finance, with a view to give housing construction a fresh start in the coming building year."

He telegraphed the commerce department's business advisory council meeting in Chicago that he looked forward to an early meeting "so we may have the opportunity of talking over the problems that affect us so vitally."

Also vying for attention among capital business developments was the plea of railroads for a half-billion dollar freight rate increase; prices fixed by the coal commission for the $11,000,000,000 soft coal industry, and the government's antitrust suit against Western Union and Postal Telegraph and Cable corporation.

Communist League Urges Dykstra to 'be Bolder'

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Impatient radicals on the state university campus, attempting to prod President Clarence A. Dykstra out of his cautious course as new university administrator, this week called upon him to "Please be bolder."

Appearing for the first time in printed form, a new four-page tabloid newspaper published by the Young Communist league at the university exhorted Dykstra as follows:

"If you are really a progressive man, you need not be afraid to take progressive action in our state. It is our tradition. Students demand better salaries for the junior staff, better housing conditions, new buildings that education in our state may expand. Those issues are the touchstones of progress on our campus. Act. Please be bolder."

Edited by Cornelius Van Huerck, a senior from Appleton, the publication said, "we are asking the question, 'Will Dykstra out-Frank Frank?' referring to Glenn Frank, former university head."

Van Huerck in his editorials expressed dissatisfaction with the action of Dykstra in "stabilizing" deans' salaries at $8,000 a year when the junior staff "should be first in line" for salary increases.

The paper said it appreciated Dykstra's "democratic attitude toward the student body, a fine contrast against the autocratic manners of Dr. Frank."

Van Huerck is a senior in the college of letters and sciences at the university and is active in liberal organizations at the school.

B Team Defeated In Shawano Game

Missed Free Throws Contribute to Loss in Uphill Battle

New London—A mad scramble for the ball in the last minute of play failed to net the New London "B" squad the necessary basket to at least tie the Indian second string cagers in a preliminary game at Shawano last night and they lost 13 to 11 after an uphill fight all the way.

Shaken 7 to 0 in the first quarter they gained 11 to 5 at the half and broke even in the third quarter for a 12 to 6 tally. Putting on the pressure in the last quarter they garnered three points on fouls after missing three other gift shots and entered the last three minutes of play at 12 to 9.

Kenneth Ross sank a long desperate shot to count 12 to 11. Huzzar missed a set-up and others passed up scoring chances in the excitement. With a chance to tie on a technical foul, Shawano scored and McKeljohn missed, leaving the score 13-11 at the final horn.

The team made seven free throws and missed six while the Shawano players counted on five buckets, made three out of four charity shots.

Following is the individual scoring on the New London team: Ross, 1; 2, Brault, 1; Poppy, 1; W. Hammerberg, 1; McKeljohn, 2; Huzzar, 1; A. Anton Herms and Dean Jeffers also saw action.

Canning Factory Guards Costing City $18 Per Day

Council Approves Plan to Share Cost of Deputies at Plant

New London—Sheriff's deputies guarding the Hamilton and Sons Canning company plant during the present strike situation are costing New London $18 every day, according to an agreement between the city and Waupaca county which was approved by the common council at a special meeting last night.

Six outside men have been stationed at the plant by sheriff Duncan Campbell, two during the day and four at night, at wages of 50 cents an hour. It was pointed out that the law requires the city to pay all the costs of protecting the property of all citizens during a strike. Total cost of retaining the deputies amounts to $36 per day but county authorities offered to pay half the sum. The men were placed on duty Monday.

Men from out of town were placed on guard on the recommendation of the sheriff and local police department. Ill-feeling would be aroused by the presence of local persons at the plant and might precipitate trouble, it was pointed out. Plans for all specifications of the Hamilton Memorial Stadium as returned for approval by the Stevens Point office of the WPA were considered by the council but no action taken. Aldermen were doubtful of some original figures and decided to withhold action until the next regular meeting Tuesday evening when Walter J. Schoenrock, architect and designer, will be asked to explain the altered set of figures to the council.

Seek City Funds For Decorations

But Attempt to Revive Motion for Council Appropriation Fails

New London—New London still faces the Christmas season with prospects of no holiday decorations on the public streets, after further dickering on the matter by the common council at a special meeting last night brought no favorable results.

Alderman William Litts attempted to renew the motion for a $50 appropriation which was deadlocked at a special meeting Monday but such action, according to parliamentary procedure, must come from the opposing side.

William Behm, formerly opposed to the plan, entered a favorable motion but none of the remaining four aldermen could be induced to second his stand. Still holding the opposition are Springmire, Thomas, Emans and Meating.

Four business men were present to represent the merchants, who through the retail traders' division of the chamber of commerce, Tuesday evening decided not to bear the cost of decorating the streets as in past years. Harvey Steinberg acted as spokesman and presented the merchants' case before the council.

Kimberly Groups Make Plans for Christmas Party

Event at Clubhouse Scheduled for Evening Of Dec. 21

Kimberly—Santa Claus will make a personal appearance in Kimberly at the clubhouse Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, and will give each child a bag of candy. Both the public school and the Holy Name school will stage a short program at 6:30 during which Santa will arrive. The program is sponsored by William Verhagen Post No. 60 of the American Legion, its auxiliary, the village board and Booster club.

During a similar program last year more than 1,100 bags of candy were distributed by Santa and his helpers. Preparations will be made for a larger number this year.

The older child of a family in school will receive enough tickets for his younger brothers and sisters. Parents whose children are too young to attend school may secure their tickets from George McElroy at the clubhouse.

The local firemen and police officers will be on hand during the program to see that order is kept and watch the exits so that they are not blocked in case of emergency. The huge tree in front of the clubhouse will be lighted with colorful lights. The committee in charge to make necessary arrangements for Santa's arrival are C. J. Fieweger, B. J. Ouellette and George McElroy.

POOR, POVERTY STRICKEN AMERICA

In a recent speech at Augsburg the German Chancellor compared the restricted domain of the Reich with what he chose to call the "great empires of the world." Great Britain, France, Russia and our own America.

That the purpose of Mr. Hitler was realized by the immense throng of Germans who listened to him is made clear by an American newspaper correspondent who described the "almost hysterical demonstration" which followed.

Though the Fuehrer had in mind the consolidation of the 80 million Germans now in Europe and about 20 per cent of whom are disunited partly due to the keen knife of the Versailles treaty, it might serve us well to look over our so-called empire, we who are sometimes disgruntled, and see what we have. Perhaps we are overlooking something. At any rate the Germans think we have a marvelous land and do not appreciate it.

At the outset we find that we are not crowded. We have a width of 3,000 miles, a length of over 1,000. Even excluding extensive territories like Alaska we have ten times the Germans' acres and but twice the German population.

Moreover we are very pleasantly situated as respects the equator from which excessive heat comes, the poles which provide too bitter blasts and neighbors that have extensive armies and ancient grudges.

We find 3,000 miles of tumbling ocean on our east and more than that on our west, more formidable fortifications for defense than any that could be built by hand. In touch with us is no power disposed presently to do us harm or able to do it if it wanted.

Excepting as we are choked occasionally by men so wise they would direct even the winds of Heaven, we produce, roughly, 20 per cent of the world's wheat, 60 per cent of its cotton, 30 per cent of its tobacco, 60 per cent of its corn, 35 per cent of its iron ore, 10 per cent of its cattle, 20 per cent of its swine and 40 per cent of its copper, and this, although we have but 5 per cent of the world's population.

We have every article that a fertile soil produces except a limited few, such as rubber, coffee and bananas.

Although we produce but 10 per cent of the world's gold supply we find that in our strong boxes built into the Appalachian hills we have 13 billion dollars, much more than half the garnered gold, and that Great Britain and France, our nearest competitors in this line, have neither of them more than 3 billions.

We came into possession of this gold primarily because of the American system of freedom and, secondarily, because of the American genius of invention made possible under that system of freedom.

Upon reflection can you blame the German people for looking at this treasure house of ours with envy, at our millions of fertile acres, at our rushing waterpowers generating energy, at our cattle ranches so extensive the eye cannot pierce their limits, at our mines, oil geysers, and ribboned highways?

But the German who could view this scene without prejudice or predetermined opinion would likely wonder at the strange confusion that keeps many capable and willing men out of employment and therefore out of the full enjoyment of this America of ours.

There are doubtless many causes, great and small, that make us trail furthest to the rear of all countries recovering from the world depression, so far to the rear of a nation like Great Britain, democratic like our own, that we ought to blush in shame.

Among the substantial reasons that account for this condition we must not shut our eyes to the rather low standard of ability we put in office. And now we are not talking about elective office, important as that is too. We have in mind the men appointed to the critical positions of cabinet member and the numerous heads of equally important departments by whom our President and congress must be supplied with a constant flow of dependable information, advice and suggestion.

Mr. Roosevelt's is not the only administration that induced excellent men to enter public life only to see them gradually quit in disgust at the manners and methods, at the wastage and corruption they saw and which they were not privileged to stop because it might interfere with politics. What-a-man Bilbo, Grab-it-all Brookhart and Tom-Tom Heflin were not the only ones who received $500 to $1,000 a month for getting in the way. Irrespective of altering political opinion and policies in our capitals no party and no leader is ever justified in putting rattleheads in commanding places.

AN ATTORNEY-GENERAL ON GAMBLING

Michigan's Attorney-General, Raymond W. Starr, came to a very sound conclusion when he declared that the opening of organized gambling joints was a reflection upon the law enforcement officer of the state.

"I don't set myself up as a reformer," declared the attorney general, "but I am against organized gambling." Moreover he called the attention of all the prosecutors in the state to their duties in the premises and said that where they wouldn't act he would.

Gambling is one of the most pernicious evils that dogs the footsteps of mankind, and one of the greatest difficulties with it lies in the inability to define it precisely.

But for all practical purposes, and the morals of a community too, it may be divided roughly into organized or commercialized gambling and gambling that is participated in fundamentally for amusement.

Commercialized gambling, where those who originate or foster it are actuated by a profit, is generally hunted out of every community. It has no saving grace. There is nothing about it good, kindly, worthy, decent or admirable. Experienced officers know that it is even worse than it looks. It invariably attracts the meanest and basest elements of humankind to the community, cheats, chiselers, forgers, thieves and, if long permitted, opens the door to violent hoodlums.

Gambling that is instituted primarily for amusement becomes dangerous only when it becomes too general or repeated too often. If it must be a daily affair one may suspect with good reason that it does not attract merely for the purpose of amusing.

What may be particularly admired was the feeling of shame that Michigan's attorney general confessed when he learned that public gambling had been opened up in the capital. He took it as a personal insult. When the accusing finger points more directly at the responsibility of prosecutors who permit this train of evils to filter through a community they are much less likely to permit it.

GAS TAXES TO THE ROADS

The demand of President Roosevelt to slash the annual federal contribution to the building of roads is not only logical but will serve to make states do their share, a thing they have been studiously avoiding.

Few of the states in this country have been as faithful as Wisconsin to the proposition that the gasoline tax must build roads. Other states, pinched for money, have diverted these funds to a variety of purposes. Perhaps some of these purposes have been necessary but we doubt it. Even during the darkest days of the depression no state should have been in financial trouble excepting as a punishment for former corruption, extravagance and carelessness in its public affairs.

The Wisconsin tax of 4 cents a gallon is about the minimum in the country. Some states gather in as high as 8 cents. When they use the heavy funds so collected for purposes other than road building they are breaking faith with a good principle as well as with their own people, for probably in all of these cases this direct sales tax has been accepted by the people without remonstrance since it sounded like a just and reasonable thing that those who were using and enjoying the roads should pay for their betterment.

Federal contributions may have been justified in the early days because the road building program was a heavy burden at the outset just because there were no good roads.

But to have the federal government stuff its money in the states' pockets to make up for a shortage due to the states' mismanagement can hardly be called the part of wisdom.

Opinions Of Others

AFTER THE HAWAIIAN JUNKET

It is not surprising that another congressional delegation has returned from Hawaii opposed to giving the Territory statehood. The acts arguing against creating an American state in the middle of the Pacific ocean had been extensively accumulated by prior delegations. On the face of it, the mission was but nominally devoted to "investigating statehood." However, Washington advises say, this year's tour of inquiry resulted exceptionally in that some of the travelers really worked. Their lengthy hearings produced a wealth of facts bearing on sugar legislation, Hawaiian claims for federal appropriations and army and navy needs.

Congress each year must legislate on Hawaiian matters; its membership should contain men who have posted themselves by visits and study, on the ground, in the distant Territory. There may be occasion for the annual trips that usually are much enjoyed by those who go, for the major Hawaiian questions are definitely of national proportions.

But it is patent that private interests are well or ill served by Hawaiian legislation and that representatives and senators who investigate at Hawaiian expense are not in proper position to recommend proper Hawaiian action. As in the preceding instances, in this case the costs of a party of 50, including the investigators and members of their families, were met partly by an appropriation by the Hawaiian legislature and partly by private subscriptions. Such an-

ONE THING I haven't quite figured out, among a great many things, is why the Chinese never took revenge measures against the Japanese. . . it may be far-fetched and silly, and military strategists may say it's out of the question, but if Japanese planes bomb Chinese cities, why can't Chinese planes bomb Japanese cities? . . . their distances should be the same in both directions and, according to very rough figuring, the important Japanese industrial city of Osaka is about 800 miles on a straight line from Kiauchau, China. . . a modern bombing plane under experienced control, should be able to make a round trip flight and pay its respects to Japan in the meantime. . . maybe China doesn't have the men and equipment, but if she did, I don't think many people would blame her for retaliating. . .

MAIS OUI

Jonah: Perhaps, or, no doubt, you are not aware that the "double feature" operas "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" are almost always included on the same program as they are both short operas. Just don't display your ignorance about operas, as far as these two are concerned, again.

Just one of your —Daily and interested readers.

My operatic training is confined to a couple of Grace Moore movies, which is why I don't try to talk about opera. D. and I. R. should remember that a columnist will stop short of nothing to pull any kind of a gag, which is what the double-feature-opera remark was supposed to be.

If it will make D. and I. R. feel any better about me, I might add that I referred to a special Chicago matinee performance for children that it was at bargain rates, that the kids were crazy about it, and that — operatic practice notwithstanding — the man in the street would regard two operas in a single performance a double feature, no matter what length the operas. And that a gag is still a gag, no matter how lousy.

Playing the "Anvil Chorus"

But D. and I. R. certainly has me in the doghouse on this opera business, and I can't seem to wriggle out.

A watchful gent observed that the Culbertson bridge hand had fourteen hearts in it the other night. There are two deuces of hearts, meaning that the bridge hand (which is set and matted in New York) was in error.

Two deuces of hearts in an actual bridge game wouldn't be so serious. It would just call for a redeal.

In poker, my friends, it might be different, particularly if the deuces were wild.

I can't forget — the cartoon showing the plumpish lady standing in the stockbrokers' office and cheerily asking — "Now what am I — a bull or a bear?"

To which you might suggest — "You're a lamb, dearie, a fit lamb."

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

BIRD OF GLOOM

Now I am getting older,
There crouches on my shoulder
A somber bird that whispers
That Time is growing brief.
He stays there to annoy me,
And threatens to destroy me.
He has no hope to buoy me
Above Life's pain and grief.
Not like that happy comer,
The singing bird of summer,
He bears no lyric promise
Of better days to be.
But croaking of confusion,
Old age and disillusion,
This gloomy bird's intrusion
Clouds every day for me!

In youth, Hope did not fail me,
So must Despair assail me,
And send a bird with Sorrow
And Death upon his wing?
If he persists in showing
His gloomy feathers, knowing
My sunset sky is glowing,
I'll teach him how to sing!

Two Appleton men, W. E. Schubert, of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power company, and H. G. Noyes, of the vocational school, will meet at the Athern hotel in Oshkosh Monday with safety experts from various manufacturing companies who are planning the fourth annual Fox River valley safety conference to be held there next summer.

Bids for the construction of a new freight house by the Chicago and North Western railroad at N. Superior and W. Franklin streets will be sought soon and local contractors will be given a chance to submit estimates for the project.

THE ELIGIBLE BACHELOR MAKES HIS CHOICE

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

HEALTH CERTIFICATE

A long time ago I wrote an article entitled "The Bridegroom's Health Certificate." It was published May 11, 1914. In that article I dared to say:

Of course it is impossible to present accurate statistics bearing upon the prevalence of venereal disease in men. . . . I remember how I took a deep breath right there and plunged recklessly on. . . . but a conservative estimate is that at least one out of every three men acquires gonorrhea or syphilis before marriage, and a large percentage of these infected men transmit the disease to their innocent wives after marriage.

It would be interesting, now, to know whether that was printed as I wrote it. I failed to preserve copies of newspapers of that date. Has any present reader by any chance a copy of the paper containing that article? I'd be grateful for a chance to see it. . . . I remember also the reaction to the article. A good many readers maintained that what was sauce for the gander is sauce for the goose; they insisted the same requirement should apply to the prospective bride. But I was a bit old-fashioned and so I clung to the belief that the double standard of morals placed the onus on the man and excused the woman from submitting to a medical examination and furnishing a physician's certificate as evidence of freedom from communicable disease.

The legislation concerning the matter, however, seems to disregard any such chivalrous consideration. It requires a health certificate from both parties when they apply for a license to marry.

Commenting on this, in a personal letter and by the way, a doctor practicing in a metropolitan mid-western community says:

"We have a law here requiring every applicant for a marriage license to undergo an examination and present to the license clerk a certificate from an acceptable laboratory setting forth that the applicant is free from gonorrhea and syphilis. I think that is a good thing. However, I learned long ago that one slide reported 'negative,' especially in the case of a female gonorrhea suspect, merely means that no gonococci were found in that particular slide, but is no proof that the suspect is free from gonorrhea. I believe that chronic gonorrheal infection in a woman can be ruled out only by repeated slides, and finally by a culture. Of course, a fresh infection offers little difficulty, but after all it is largely a farce to give such a certificate on the basis of a single slide that happens to be 'negative.' I don't believe to be in a hundred of the certificates of 'freedom from gonorrhea and syphilis' that are issued are properly issued. Nevertheless, I believe the principle is a good one, altho the law may have to be modified eventually."

That view of the matter will be shared by most competent physicians, I think.

In twenty-three years, as many readers will be pleased to know, my attitude has abated perceptibly and I now believe the bride, too, requires a health certificate.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
The Iodin Ration

A year ago I began taking an iodine ration as suggested by you. Proof of the benefit I have derived from it is in my increased weight (I am nearly normal now), better appetite, greater working powers. However, my physician, a young man, tells me I read too much Brady, and that the human system can't stand that much iodine. (M. K.)

Answer — As Auntie Binell used to tell me when I was a crude sophomore — "You'll know more when you get older." Many doctors apparently have not yet heard of the experiment carried out in Michigan and other mid-west states where the health and medical authorities have promoted the universal use of an iodine ration in the form of iodized salt in place of ordinary salt. Instructions for taking an iodine ration will be mailed on request to any correspondent who incloses stamped envelope bearing his correct address. Come on, now, quit calling your home town "City" or "Local." You needn't be ashamed to write the name of your village on the envelope. There are worse places to live. The hamper where undeliverable letters go is overflowing.

Insulin to Protamine Insulin
Is there any danger of insulin shock in changing from insulin to protamine insulin? (E. L.)

Answer — Yes. One with diabetes should not attempt to change without the supervision of the physician for a few days, until the right dose and interval can be determined.

Only inquiries of general interest will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Your Birthday

"SAGITTARIUS"

If December 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.; from 3 to 5 p. m., and from 9 to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. from 7 to 9 p. m., and from 11 p. m. until midnight.

You may be able to help make this a bright day for someone by a social call. This is a day that requires cheerful dispositions to offset a predisposition on the part of many to be melancholy, so do your best to look on the sunny side of things, and help perk up the downhearted. Unbridled appetites can cause much trouble this day. Called for opposition to any suggestion will upset household peace and turn out to be a decidedly tactless stand to take, particularly if there is no logical reason for it. Trying to impress someone at one of other person's expense will be one of the day's greatest mistakes. Married and engaged couples, as well as those going through the stages of courtship, will make a great mistake to indulge in any form of stubbornness this day.

If a woman and December 5 is your birthday, you may have a tremendous amount of dramatic instinct. You know most likely how to make worthwhile friends. Your personality ought to be one of your greatest assets, so make good use of it. You are probably very versatile, with a remarkably good memory. Restraint of any kind is apt to be very irksome to you, so you might do better in a business of your own, than you would in taking orders from someone else. You may be entering a cycle that will be a very prosperous and happy one. In a gift shop, tea room, the theatre, an insurance or real estate office, or literary work, your achievements may be most grati-tying. Some men ought to be capable of making you very happy, and you, as his wife, should be able always to hold his love and devotion.

The child born on December 5, may be very aggressive, intelligent, and affectionate. In his latter years this youngster may discover it has an exceptional amount of talent in some particular line of work, and the chances are it will have the opportunity to use it profitably.

If a man and December 5 is your natal day, the time may soon come when you will have the chance to make plenty of money in a thoroughly legitimate way. Through investing, manufacturing, selling, acting, writing, law or medicine a fortune is liable to come your way. Successful people born on December 5: George A. Custer, Cavalry officer. Harry W. Pillsbury, Chess player. David C. Houston, Engineer. John Eaton, Journalist and editor.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY GEORGE TUCKER

New York—Personal notes off a New Yorker's cuff:

Pickets in front of a Broadway cinema carry banners which flaunt the legend: "Do not see 'Wings Over Shanghai.' It is unfair to Japan." But one of the pickets himself is a Chinese.

The prettiest girl glimpsed at recent opening nights has been Loretta Young, which is bad for the actors. When she is there the audience can't keep its mind on the stage.

There have been many books with weird titles this season, but the most upsetting has been that tome called "Rats, Cats and History." . . . See, you never can tell! Ethel Barrymore is back on Broadway, and it hasn't been a year since she renounced the stage forever.

One of the most hilarious theatrical moments of the season happens mid-way the second act in "Madam Bovary." A half-wit boy is in love with the heroine and, entering her room, he happens to catch a glimpse of the lady's lingerie which the maid has tossed into the soiled clothes basket. Fascinated and crimson with embarrassment, he can only stare. But the maid is a cross-grained shrew, and she screams: "Haven't you ever seen a pair of drawers before? You look like you think it's the Holy Grail!"

Ray Henderson's recent death has caused Katharine Cornell to cancel her plans for a world theatrical tour. . . . The local sports writers are waging a terrific campaign to land the Fordham Rams in the Rose Bowl.

A fascinating place to walk is along Madison Avenue after dark. There are windows between 55th and 58th which exhibit delicate silver work and fragile china bric-a-brac. . . . In one such place I saw a tiny pepper grinder (price $23) hand wrought from sterling. Another carried intriguing cigarette boxes, thimble holders, and other pleasing but useless items, all carved from silver and ivory. A few steps further on was a bright painting which drew more eyes than all the silver and gold in the windows. It revealed three priests convulsed with laughter, as if one had just related a witty story.

At a broadcast the other night which I attended one of the principals, a comic strip artist who was being interviewed, forgot his lines and walked away from the mike at the wrong time. Several other comic artists were there, and

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

This is the second of two articles in which Preston Grover, himself a reserve officer and student of military tactics, explains the how and why of the U. S. army's new mechanized division.

Washington—Imagine some well-prepared enemy is landing an invading force on one of our shores. His attack is expected but where he will attack is not exactly known until he hits.

Instantly a half dozen mechanized U. S. divisions take to the highways at 60 miles an hour. With 13,000 fighting men, light and medium artillery, armored cars and machine guns in each division, they smash at him in front, on the flanks and perhaps dash behind him to cut him off from his boats. The country is safe again to enjoy its prosperity and depressions in peace.

That is the ideal behind the development of the test-tube division that performed wonders of maneuver and attack in a simulated war in Texas recently.

With hard-hitting, fast-moving battalions to attack the enemy before he has time to land a large force, the army plans to hold him off until a cavalry or recruited army can be trained and equipped.

Two Problems Remain

Soldiers who have done all their fighting on maps were prone to look upon the speedy work of the tank-and-tank division in Texas as the answer to a warrior's prayers. It had speed, tremendous fire power—and no horses to curvy and feed.

Veteran officers who had fought in the Philippines and in France liked the performance too. To them it was clear as day that the old 16-mile-a-day foot soldier, horse-drawn artillery division was almost as obsolete as a wooden battle ship. But they saw two problems not solved entirely to their satisfaction by the demonstration in Texas.

The first was reconnaissance, the business of scouting the battle area to find where to put troops and artillery and to find where the enemy has put or likely will put his troops and guns.

The second was supply.

Reconnaissance and supply are the parts of war easiest handled on map but hardest in actual fighting. In the fast-moving mechanized division in Texas, scout cars were used where highways were available. With a net of good highways available nothing more is needed. For scouting, there are no highways. For a 25-mile-an-hour armored car with belt-bread took over the job.

May Still Need Horses

The mechanized division, faster than horse and foot reconnoitering—but they can't operate among trees. Horses can. Bogs, streams and excessively rough country stop the cars, but not horses or men. The question is: Of how much value is the speed, if the army loses the horses—their seeing eye?

The question of supply is no less troublesome. Germany's highly mechanized army, designed for a quick penetrating attack into enemy territory, has kept the horse to pull many of its light artillery regiments. Even if feed supplies are left behind in the mad dash, a horse will continue to work for a time without meals. A truck won't. And it is surprising the busy haul of gasoline tanks that are kept busy hauling gasoline to a motorized division.

The design of the motorized division, which is barely half the World war size, was worked over for two years by the army general staff and all its special schools before being put into actual test. It will be further studied before the army takes the final step of putting itself on wheels. But best authorities know the change is coming.

NEWSPAPER HELPED

Editor Post-Crescent—The generous cooperation of daily newspapers in the educational campaign covering the Unemployment Census proved exceedingly helpful to the Government, as well as to the many persons throughout the land interested, directly and indirectly, in the success of this undertaking.

The voluntary nature of the Census made it essential to obtain a wide dissemination of information. The shortness of time, due to the necessity of getting this work out of the way before the Christmas rush in the Post Office Department, made an intensive campaign necessary. That the educational campaign was effective is indicated by the fact that telegraphic reports from fourteen typical cities show that the Unemployment Census in Canada were filled out with such accuracy that only 1 per cent required call backs. To this result daily newspapers made a major contribution.

The editorial cooperation of daily newspapers was likewise an important factor in obtaining public acceptance of the importance to the Nation of getting the basic facts of unemployment as a preliminary step in a long range plan of reemployment.

Officially I acknowledge your part in this great public undertaking, and, personally, I thank you.

Romantic Comedy Coming to Elite

Carroll, Lederer, Auer Will Star in "It's All Yours"

Madeline Carroll loves Francis Lederer; Mischa Auer adores Madeline Carroll and Francis Lederer adores Mischa Auer in Columbia's zesty new romantic comedy, "It's All Yours," which will head the new screen bill at the Elite Theater on Monday and Tuesday, Bargain Days.

Directed by Elliott Nugent from a screen play by Mary C. McCall, Jr., the film romps riotously through more romantic complications than ever floored Cupid with one fatal blow.

Speaking specifically, Madeline is a mouse-like secretary to an umpire-millionaire who brings his foreign-bred nephew, Francis Lederer, to the States. Five years later Lederer's escapades are the scandal of San Francisco. On his death bed, Lederer's uncle leaves his entire fortune to Madeline to make Lederer fall in love with her and marry the fortune instead of inheriting it.

Madeline goes wild. To prevent her from spending the fortune while he tries to recoup it through the courts, Lederer goes along as her private secretary. Thus begins one of the wildest husband-hunts in all screen history, with Mischa Auer, a penniless Baron, joining in the fun.

Supporting the principals is an imposing cast of fan favorites including J. C. Nugent, Grace Bradley, Victor Kilian, George McKay and Charles Waldron.

Two Glamorous Stars Show in "Stage Door"

Based on the highly successful play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman, "Stage Door," the long awaited picture which teams for the first time Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers, opened to a roar of plaudits yesterday for five days at the Rio Theater. The two glamorous stars add new laurels to noteworthy careers by their superb performances in the remarkably compelling drama and share top honors with Adolphe Menjou, who in the role of a Broadway producer, recalls his outstanding performance in Miss Hepburn's Academy award picture, "Morning Glory," in which he played a similar part. Other players who win distinct recognition are Gall Patrick, Constance Collier, Andrea Leeds, Samuel B. Hinds, Lucille Ball, and a score of youngsters, many of whom are newcomers to the screen.

The added feature on the same program is "Expensive Husbands," a hilarious comedy romance starring Patric Knowles and Beverly Roberts.

Appleton's Picture Is "Something New"

There's something new in screen musicals under the cinema sun, at last! It's "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938," the technicolor musical which has been playing at the Appleton Theater since Wednesday and treated theater audiences to the grandest evening's entertainment of the season.

Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett head the dazzling cast of screen stars and night clubsters in this gay, romantic tale of Manhattan, which offers us a glimpse of new years fashions in fun, girls, gowns, music, dances and love, from the pens of Samuel and Bella Spewack, and wrote the sensational Broadway success, "Boy Meets Girl." And, incidentally, there's a thrill in store for you when you see what has been done with technicolor.

Republic has done an astute bit of casting in putting Freda Inescort in the title role of "Portia On Trial," the second feature on this program, for that splendid actress has just the proper maturity and emotional depth to give the role the strength and pathos it requires.

Jack Holt Scores in "Outlaws of the Orient"

Jack Holt will not disappoint his many fans in his latest film, "Outlaws of the Orient," a Columbia picture at the Elite Theater, today and Sunday. Action . . . action . . . and more action is on the bill of fare. Clattering hoofs . . . battering fists . . . and spattering bullets keep up a staccato, fast-paced tempo as a thrilling drama of the oil fields unfolds on the Gobi desert.

Holt is superb in the starring role. His performance, as usual, is sincere and believable. Mae Clarke in the leading feminine role contributes dash and beauty, and of course, a capable interpretation of her role. Harold Huber, as a war lord is as menacing and villainous a character as the screen has ever contributed.

Hollywood News And Gossip

BY ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — All work and no play makes jack — for Uncle Sam, say some of the colony's best paid stars.

Keeping their incomes out of the higher tax brackets, where the cash residue from excess earnings scarcely balances in the stellar mind with a nice three months' vacation, has become a serious game with these folks. This game joins with the usual professional reason — fewer pictures bring longer screen life — to make these stars extremely choosy about the pictures they'll do.

One cause or the other, usually both, accounts for limited screen appearances of such people as Claudette Colbert, Garbo, Dietrich, Carole Lombard, William Powell, Ronald Colman, Irene Dunne.

These under contract or on their own, are "shopping" for vehicles. They'll take the one they think you'll favor when you shop for pictures to see.

And so the producers, each trying to lure a big fish with choice

KAUKAUNA TO HEAR BOWES UNIT

Major Bowes Anniversary Unit in person, consisting of 10 big acts, comes to the Rialto Theater, Kaukauna, Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 6 and 7. The acts include, Evelyn Altman, versatile roller skater and tap dancer; Bill Broadway, "The Believe It or Not Boy"; The Five Jacks, five harmonica jacks; Ann Palmer, composer, singer, pianist; Dave Barry, imitator; Marshall Rodgers, musical glass wizard; Youman Brothers, sensational imitators of popular orchestras; and several other acts chosen especially for the anniversary unit.

In addition to the personal appearance of these amateurs there is a well-balanced screen program.

Today's screen presentation shows "The Man Who Cried Wolf," starring Lewis Stone, Tom Brown and Barbara Read.

Starting at the Saturday midnight show and showing continuous through Sunday, James Cagney, in "Something to Sing About."

BURNS, ALLEN IN NEW MOVIE

Combining a P. G. Wodehouse story with a group of sparkling songs by the Gershwins, Fred Astaire's new starring picture with Burns and Allen, "A Damsel in Distress," is said to be one of the year's funniest and most tuneful screen offerings. It starts Friday at the Rio Theater.

Astaire reveals a novel group of dance routines, most conspicuous and sensational of which is his Drum Dance, in which he plays a dozen different percussion instruments while doing his steps in the midst of an orchestra stage. Another novelty is the whisk-broom dance which he performs with Burns and Allen as his partners. A sprightly comedy routine is Astaire's Street Dance, performed to "I Can't Be Bothered Now," as he edges away from a truculent policeman.

bait, are shopping for vehicles—better stories, better production, bigger pictures to get valuable names on their respective dotted lines. Colbert commits herself to Warner Bros. for a picture, but she doesn't visit for a run-of-the-mill vehicle. She takes "Tovarich," important enough for Kay Francis to sue about. William Powell's been talking new deal with Metro, and he'll protect himself against future "Double Weddings" or I miss. Ronald Colman, elusive to producers as in private life, signed with Roach for "Fancy Free." Knowing nothing of the story, I'm content that it's pretty good — else Colman would not take it. Grace Moore, with a picture to do at Columbia, skipped town—she didn't like her vehicle.

Town Without Boundaries Hollywood, often described as a state of mind, or a town without boundaries, recently acquired city limits as an outgrowth of the forgotten Culver City-Hollywood name dispute.

COOPER AGAIN IN ADVENTUROUS ROLE

Picture's most famous soldier-of-fortune, stalwart Gary Cooper, comes to the screen again as an adventurer in what has been called the most powerful role of his distinguished career in "Souls at Sea," the epic of the sea which opens at the Elite Theater for 3 days starting next Wednesday.

Cooper plays the hero of a true story for the first time in his career in "Souls at Sea." He re-enacts the role played in real life by "Nugget" Taylor, a sea captain of the '40's, whose famous trial for manslaughter on the high seas is one of the ocean's most amazing and thrilling stories. He is supported by George Raft, Frances Dee, Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey, Olympe Bradna, Robert Cummings, Porter Hall and many other noted featured players.

Miss MacDonald In "The Firefly"

Friml's Operetta Makes One of Best Pictures of Year

Foremost musical picture of the year, and probably in screen history, Rudolf Friml's operetta, "The Firefly," comes to the Rio theater soon, with Jeanette MacDonald starred, and Allan Jones and Warren William in featured roles.

Jeanette MacDonald appears in her seventeenth musical triumph and it is unmistakably her finest. Allan Jones emerges as a star in his own right. Warren William performs with his accustomed artistry.

Filmed in the High Sierras and on thirty tremendous sets, the picture reveals a background of unsurpassed beauty. Five of the seven musical features are from Friml's original operetta and he wrote the other two especially for the picture.

The excellent supporting cast includes Lily Gilbert, Henry Daniell, Douglas Dumbrille, Leonard Penn, Tom Rutherford, Belle Mitchell, George Zucco, Corbett Morris and Matthew Boulton, with an enormous group of customed extras.

Miss MacDonald dances with rare grace and sings "Love Is Like a Firefly," "He Who Loves and Runs Away" and "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart." Jones sings "A Woman's Kiss" and "The Dancer's Serenade," and they join in duet in "Giannina Mia" and "Sympathy."

Jeanette MacDonald scores a personal triumph in the title role as the colorful dancing girl of Madrid. Allan Jones has his finest acting and singing role. Warren William adds new laurels to his reputation as a distinguished actor, and every member of the cast is truly fine.

"The Firefly" is the screen's most illuminating example of its own artistic ideals.

Map Protection of Port From Naval Air Raids

Beirut, Lebanon—The construction of an important commercial port for Tripoli and the building of military fortifications to protect it against naval and air raids were announced by the Lebanese prime minister in an interview.

"I don't know whether the French military authorities propose to construct a naval base there," he said. "I do know, however, that numerous barracks are being built. Since Tripoli, as a terminus of the pipeline from Mosul, will be the pipeline from attacks in the event of war, it is in the interest of the inhabitants that it should be fortified. In addition, a large commercial port will be built, the construction of which will be undertaken by a national company.

where, nowadays. Where it isn't, it goes to get what it wants.

Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, of the Met, couldn't come to Hollywood in time, so Paramount sent a set and crew to New York to get her scenes for "Big Broadcast."

The music for "100 Men and a Girl" was recorded in the east, photographed in Hollywood.

"Background crews" are everywhere, canning scenery to be shipped to Hollywood, revived through the trick process screen on Hollywood stages.

No More 'Legit' When M-G-M staged its first studio air show—for a food product it doesn't (or didn't) use in its own commissary—the scene was the stage of Hollywood's last stronghold of the "legitimate" theater. It was a good show to see, especially when you include such irrelevant treats as watching Jeanette MacDonald sing with her reading specs on.

In a way, sentimentally speaking, it was a bit ghoulish—radio and the movies getting together to dance over the grave of the dear local "legit" of blessed memory.

"DEATH IN THE DEEP SOUTH"

There has been nothing quite like it to ever reach the screen. If you have read Ward Greene's "Death in the Deep South," from which it is adapted, you can appreciate that fact. A terrific indictment of prejudice and of the methods of news gathering by some newspapers out to build up sensational stories at any cost. A smashing screen document, "They Won't Forget," starts at the Appleton theater for 3 big days Thursday, Dec. 9. Also on the same program, in the funniest yet, Wheeler and Woolsey in "High Flyers."

Needn't be Craftsman to Make Christmas Presents

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Gifts of handiwork are always appropriate at Christmas time and the nature lover who would like to present a bit of his beloved woodland to some shut-in friend will find plenty of material to fashion a variety of unusual, "woody" gifts.

You need not be a master of any of the tools of a craftsman in order to make these simple gifts. Evergreen sprays, wild berries, slabs of wood, bark, moss, twigs, earth and stones are the materials you may use and the tools necessary are the simple ones found in every household.

Last year I described the procedure in making gardens under glass, or terrariums. Recently I've had several requests asking me to repeat the "recipe" for these miniature woodlands.

A glass bowl of any size or shape can be used, but the larger ones are a bit better because a mossy slab of wood or a lichen-covered stone can be added to give the scene a more natural look. An aquarium which has been cracked or for any other reason can no longer be used as a fish bowl can safely be used for this purpose.

How to Build Soil Prepare a mixture of the following: one part sand, three parts peat and moss, one part drainage material, that is, coarse sand or gravel, cinders or bits of broken pottery.

To this add a little crumbled charcoal.

Make a crummy mixture of these materials. If it appears too dry add just enough water so that it clings together, but does not cake. The mixture should resemble the moist, peaty earth you find in shady woods.

Fill the bowl about one-fourth full with this mixture. From woods, gather mosses, lichens, evergreen ferns and other small, evergreen plants. In gathering these plants take along a knife to dig them out in clumps, with enough of their own soil so that they can be transplanted safely. Try to find a variety of plants, and when planting them in the bowl distribute them so as to have a colorful garden. Among the green mosses plant the gray reindeer lichen and the scarlet cup lichen. Such evergreen ferns as the leather and common woodlens, polypody and walking fern can often be found only an inch or two in height and these can be planted even in the tiniest terrarium.

Dwarf dogwood with its orange berries or a tiny spray of the partridgeberry vine will add more color to the scene. When everything is planted place a glass cover over the top. This cover remains on all the time except when too much moisture forms on the side of the bowl. Then it may be removed for a short time.

Sectional Hatred Is Theme of Movie

"They Won't Forget" Comes From Much-Talked About Novel

Is it possible, in the United States, for an innocent man to be convicted of murder and sent to his doom because of circumstantial evidence alone? It is according to a truly sensational picture called "They Won't Forget," which will start at the Appleton theater next week Thursday for a week's run.

Mervyn LeRoy, whose astonishing movie entitled "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," caused nation-wide discussion a few years ago, is responsible for this one too. "They Won't Forget" was made from the much-talked-of novel by Ward Greene, "Death in the Deep South."

Strictly speaking, it wasn't circumstantial evidence alone that doomed young Robert Hale, the victim. It was also a spirit of sectional hatred, violently and craftily stirred up by a politician-prosecutor who sought to ride to higher honors on the wave of hysteria. But this merely adds to the gripping and thought-provoking quality of the photoplay.

The excellent cast in this unusual picture includes Claude Rains, as the district attorney who wants to be governor, Edward Norris, as Hale, the victim, Clinton Rosamond, Lana Turner and Elisha Cook, Jr.

Wheeler and Woolsey, the two high-voltage funmakers of the screen, take to the air in what is said to be the maddest, merriest of all their big-laugh comedies, "High Flyers," the second feature on this program. Fiery Lupe Velez is their leading lady, with Marjorie Lord, Margaret Dumont and Jack Carson appearing in prominent roles. The comedians are cast as operators of a truck airplane concession, with Wheeler as a grounded ace giving flying lessons, while Woolsey officiates as "barber."

Cover the bowl with a glass top and tie a red ribbon around its neck. The bright red and green in the bowl makes this a real Christmas gift.

The twigs which are trimmed off the Christmas tree can be put to a number of uses. Birch wood, cut either in slabs or in one inch cross-pieces can be made into candle-sticks. Drill holes to fit the candles or tack on small tin candle holders and decorate the slab with the surplus Christmas tree sprays.

Rustic-looking baskets can easily be made from small branches of birch, cherry or other trees. Cut the twigs or branches to simple lengths and then fashion a simple "cross-pile" manner, each pair of twigs laid crosswise at opposite ends over the pair below, the cut ends putting out at right angles. Anyone who has ever piled green stove wood will know what I mean by "cross-piling."

For the handle of the basket twist together two long slender twigs and fasten them to opposite sides of the basket. Fill the basket with sprays of pine, spruce, balsam, cedar or any other evergreen and add bright berries of bitter-sweet, Wisconsin holly, or any other bright-colored fruit.

Christmas wreaths and other holiday festoons can be made from material gathered in woods. In scouting for your gift material remember to leave the rarer plants alone and gather only enough of the common plants for your needs.

LIKES LIFE UNDER THE 'BIG TOP' Miss Mary Erdlitz, Oshkosh, who was a performer with the Ringling Barnum and Bailey circus last summer, addressed members of the Menasha Economics club yesterday afternoon at the Twin City Y.W.C.A. and said she had no regrets at leaving college to hit the "sawdust trail." She believes experience gained under the "big top" is as valuable as a college education.

Mary Erdlitz Tells Club About Life Under 'Big Top'

Neenah — Declaring that she had no regrets at leaving college, that education gained during her life under the "big top" was as good as a college education, Miss Mary Erdlitz, Oshkosh, who as a performer with the Ringling Barnum and Bailey Circus last summer, told members of the Menasha Economics club Friday afternoon in Twin City Y. W. C. A. that she had kept a detailed account of each days events while with circus and hopes some day to make them into a book.

Ever since she was a little girl, Mary Erdlitz has wanted to be with the circus and finally after much persuasion, her family consented to her joining the troupe of the Ringling Barnum and Bailey circus, the troupe among which Miss Erdlitz has "her greatest friends."

Joining the circus last February, Miss Erdlitz went to Sarasota, Fla. for the training period where the circus had a small city of its own, covering 12 acres where 500 men are employed during the winter with repair work and 100 more fixing up wardrobes.

Most of the performers go on vacations during the winter or to winter shows in Cuba and Europe. Miss Erdlitz told her listeners but during March everyone is back in circus town for training for the Madison Square Garden show in New York city.

Show in New York

Miss Erdlitz told of her excitement during the first night performance at Madison Square Garden where it is said "the circus brings spring to New York city." During the 24 days in New York, the show gave benefit performances for orphans and crippled children.

"Notable people come to the circus at Madison Square Garden," said Miss Erdlitz, "and we saw Adlai Byrd and his party, Marilyn Delrich, Philip Holmes, Lily Pons, Joe E. Brown, and many others. From New York city, the circus went to Boston Gardens for a one week stand, to Brooklyn, N. Y., where the circus population lived for the first time that season under canvas, then on to Washington, D. C., Philadelphia, and then began the one day stands throughout the United States."

"The circus played in 34 states in 217 days and traveled 15,000 miles. The population of the four train contingent was 1,608 of which there were 49 nationalities. Seventy chefs and waiters give 1,600 meals three times daily and the food is good."

"The circus train has cars for single men, cars for single girls, cars for married couples and state-room accommodations for the stars. In the car in which I lived, there were 32 berths and the girls decorated them to make them appear like their own rooms. Built in dressing tables make the entire car seem like a college room, one of the nicest. We were supervised and chaperoned by older women and had to be in at certain hour each evening."

Systematic Moving

Miss Erdlitz told club members about the definite system by which the circus operates and explained how each car leaves the section known as the flying squadron or cook house leaving a town in which they are making a one day stand about 10:30 in the evening, the

Has 'No Idea' When New Department Will Begin to Function

Madison—Harry Jack, Hortonville, said here yesterday that he "has no idea" when the new department of agriculture recently created by the state legislature will be organized to succeed the present department of agriculture and markets.

Jack is a member of the new board which will manage the affairs of the new department and will succeed the present commissioners of the department, Charles L. Hill and Fred Schultheiss.

The Outagamie county farm leader visited with Governor LaFollette here yesterday but declined to reveal the subject of their discussions.

As head of the Wisconsin Cooperative Milk pool, Jack reported that the affairs of that organization are progressing satisfactorily.

Grade Crossing May Be Closed in Grand Chute

Closing of a crossing intersecting the Chicago and North Western railroad tracks on Charlotte street in the town of Grand Chute will be considered at a hearing ordered by the Wisconsin Public Service commission at Madison at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 14, in the chambers of the industrial commission.

The hearing was ordered by the commission following the hearing on Oct. 16 of the town petition to have a new crossing opened on N. Owaisa street. In issuing the order the commission stated that it probably would be advisable to eliminate the Charlotte street crossing before opening the one on Owaisa street. A decision on the proposed Owaisa street crossing is expected to be made after the hearing on closing the Charlotte street crossing which is two blocks east of the proposed one.

Postpone Marriage Until Able to Stand on Own Feet

BY DOROTHY DIX

"Dear Dorothy Dix—I am 20 years of age and belong to a prosperous family. I have had everything handed to me on a silver platter all of my life and have now my first real steady job, and like it. Am in love with a girl of 18 who has also had everything given her that she wanted. Our families object to our marriage because they think that we are too young and that I could not support a wife. What do you think? Can we two step out in the world and make a go of it when we have always depended upon our parents until now?"

UNDECIDED LARRY.

Answer: Of course, it will be possible for two youngsters, one in her teens and the other barely out of his, to cut loose from the parents who have always supported them and marry and make a success of it, but the chances are so enormously against it that it isn't even a sporting proposition. So my earnest advice to you is to listen to your parents' counsel and wait until you have at least learned to stand on your own feet and proved that you are able to support a wife before you take one.

Wives are expensive luxuries, you know. You haven't any idea that living costs so much and that there are so many bills in the world until you come to grips with the butcher, baker and candlestick-maker, to say nothing of the landlord, the beautician, the doctor and so on. When Papa paid it was one thing. When you have to pay it is another. And quite different.

Of course, you will say that in the past boys and girls of the age of you and your sweetie married and started out in life for themselves, and they got along all right, so why shouldn't you? Perhaps your father and mother married on a shoestring when they were just out of school and look how happy they have been and how they prospered.

True, but the difference between your pioneer ancestors and you and your girl is that they had been hardened to meet life, while you have been softened and protected from it. From the cradle they were on their own. No indulgent parents stood between them and all responsibilities and so when they assumed the burdens of marriage their shoulders were strong enough to bear them.

In those days both men and women were trained to work and sacrifices and to an existence that had few amusements or diversions in it. Of luxuries, as we know them, they had none. When a young couple married they went to a little two-by-four cottage without, likely as not, even a bathtub or running water or a gas stove. The wife did the cooking, washing and scrubbing, patching and baby-tending, and their only amusement was what they found within their homes. They were happy and contented because they had been accustomed to nothing better.

But you would be miserable under such conditions. You cannot imagine a life being tolerable that has not in it physical comforts and beauty of surroundings, automobiles and radios, good clothes, night clubs and amusements, travel and all of the things to which you have been accustomed.

That is why, when the modern boy and girl marry before they are ready for it, their marriages so often prove failures. They cannot stand descending to a lower scale of living so, by the time their wedding clothes wear out, their romance is also in tatters and they are on their way to the divorce court.

And, furthermore, you are too young to marry, anyway. No boy of 20 and no girl of 18 are sufficiently mature in mind or body to take upon themselves the responsibilities of a family. Their tastes are changing every day and the mates they picked out in their teens they are nearly always tired of in their twenties. They are not ready to settle down. They want to have the good times that belong to their time of life, but that are not compatible with matrimony.

So take your father's advice son, and don't marry until you have arrived at man's estate. You will save yourself a lot of headaches if you do.

Airmail Prints

Nines and fours marching in square formation make the white and red plaid which patterns a blue washable play dress for one of the younger members of the family. Red airplanes and airmail letters pepper the other play frock which is trimmed in white pique edged with braid. The printed designs of both children's dresses were evolved by children.

A Little Saturday Talk

While I was in Paris, I had several talks with a 16-year-old English youth named James (or "Jim") Davis. He had come to Paris to spend three or four months studying French language, and practicing speaking it. Jim was much interested in our column, and kept trying to think of subjects which would fit in with it. One day, he said to me: "I believe your readers would like to hear about Scotland Yard."

"I think so, too," I replied. He said he had studied the English detective system "quite a bit," and I suggested that he write a letter on the subject. Here are paragraphs he has sent me:

"Scotland Yard is the nerve center of the English police force. The 'Yard' itself is a collection of rather old buildings which are getting to be too small for their staff. 'Sir Philip Game, the present commissioner of police, is in the office where the general plans of attack against criminals are made. The orders from this office are carried out by policemen and plainclothes detectives all over the country."

"Scotland Yard has a 'rogues gallery' with photographs of every convicted criminal. There is also a 'black museum' containing the implements which have been used in murders of the past."

"Not far away is a broadcasting and radio receiving station. If you hear burglars in the next room, you have only to telephone Whitehall 1212, and your message is flashed out to police and detective cars. Without the blowing of any sirens or horns, you may expect policemen and detectives to be outside your door in 90 seconds."

Jim also tells of the finger print department of Scotland Yard. He says it contains the fingerprints of "those who have been in the subject. Here are paragraphs he has sent me."

Give Oil Manicure At Home

BY ELSIE PIERCE

Oil Manicure At Home

H. C. M.: You can indeed give yourself an oil manicure at home. The routine is quite similar to that of a plain manicure—briefly: removing polish, filing nails, soaking nails, pushing back cuticle, washing hands and nails, drying thoroughly and apply polish. Instead of soaking the nails in warm, soapy water use warm olive oil. A better plan if you have time, is to remove the polish and file the nails the night before. Then wrap around each nail a pad of cotton that has been saturated with warm olive oil. Put on a pair of old mittens and allow the oil to remain overnight. Go on with the manicure the next morning. I have a very complete bulletin on nail grooming and another on care of the hands. If you wish these please refer to them when you write again and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent envelope).

Dry Skin And Blackheads
W. L.: It is rather unusual for a dry skin to be troubled with blackheads. However, this is the treatment I suggest. First, cleanse the skin very thoroughly with cleansing cream. Remove with tissues. Pat with skin tonic. Then warm a little olive oil or muscle oil and apply over the area troubled with blackheads. This will soften the skin so that the blackheads yield readily. Cover the two forefingers with tissues and very gently press out the blackheads. Leave stubborn ones for another day. Pat over the area where the blackheads have been removed, with an antiseptic astringent. When the skin is free from blackheads start using a rich tissue cream to offset the dryness. Instead of leaving this on overnight, use sometime during the day or evening, leave on for about fifteen minutes, remove and pat with a mild skin tonic to close the pores. Before retiring cleanse thoroughly and leave your skin free of cream.

Falling Hair
D. L.: You say that when you brush the hair there is quite a bit of hair in the brush and that worries you because you feel the loss of hair may be causing the hair to fall. A normal amount of falling is absolutely natural. When the hair has lived its span of life it falls and makes way for a new hair that is forcing its way up through the hair follicle. It isn't the falling that worries men or women, but whether the old hairs are being replaced.

Contract Could Have Been Made With Correct Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Yesterday's question, the last one of the examination, was:

Question 58: Both sides vulnerable. You are South and hold:

♠ A K Q 9 4 ♥ K Q 9 6 ♦ A 3 ♣ J 7
The bidding has gone:
North East South West
1 heart Pass 2 spades Pass
3 spades Pass 4 no trump Pass
5 no trump Pass ?

What call do you make now? (I will help the nonusers of the Four-Five No Trump Convention by whispering to them that North's five no trump bid revealed two aces as part of his opening bid.)

Answer: You should now jump to seven hearts, not seven spades. This is an application of the sound theory that, particularly in high contracts, it is better to select for trumps a suit of which each partner holds four rather than another suit which may be longer and equally solid. The combined hands are apt to be as follows:

North:
♠ J 10 8 5 ♥ A J 10 8 ♦ K 6 2 A ♣ A 4
South:
♠ A K Q 9 4 ♥ K Q 9 6 ♦ A 3 ♣ J 7

At hearts, the grand slam is virtually a laydown without a finesse. At spades it will be necessary to take the club finesse, which is only a 50-50 chance. (One point reward for jumping to seven hearts; two points demerit for bidding only a small slam or for jumping to seven spades or seven no trump.)

This marks the end of the National Bridge Examination. Next Monday I will announce the plan of classification, based on total net points. Readers who have rated themselves will know just where they stand. Readers who have sent answers to me for rating will have to be a little patient while my staff and I complete marking the hundred thousand letters sent in. I feel that the examination was a huge success; also, judging by hundreds of comments I have heard or read, it was lots of fun.

TODAY'S HAND
North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

♥ A 5 4
♦ J 7
♣ J 10 4 3
EAST
♠ A K J 9 8 7
♥ 9 8 3 2
WEST
♠ Q 7 5 2
♥ K 10 6
♦ K 10 3 2
♣ K 5
SOUTH
♠ 10
♥ J 7
♦ Q 9 6 4
♣ Q 9 8 7 3

The bidding:
North East South West
1 heart 1 spade 2 clubs 2 spades
3 clubs Pass 4 clubs Pass
5 clubs Pass 6 clubs Double

Obviously the final contract was highly optimistic. West opened the spade spade, East won and continued spades. Declarer ruffed and took the heart finesse, then cashed the heart ace and ruffed a third round. A diamond was led to the jack, which held, and now the club finesse was taken. It lost and West returned a club. With the K-10 of diamonds still in West's hand a diamond trick, and defeat, had to be conceded.

Due to the excellent lay of cards the contract could have been made by expert play. With West doubling, it was highly unlikely that the club finesse would succeed. If, after successfully finessing the diamond jack, declarer had played back to his ace of clubs and thrown West on lead with another club West either would have had to lead away from his diamond king to the North-South combined tenace or, by returning a spade, permit a ruff and a discard.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

BY EMILY POST

CORRECTNESS VERSUS COMPROMISE
Dear Mrs. Post: I would like my growing children to become accustomed to the proper way of serving at table so that when there are older and go into houses where there is expert service, they will feel at ease. But it is sometimes extremely difficult to know how to follow formal conventions to the letter when having only one maid, who is willful but overworked. There are many shortcuts which must be taken to save her steps. One detail I have in mind especially now, is the best way to serve dessert in our house? Would you suggest having it served on the individual plates from the kitchen or having her put down the serving dish and plates at the place? Either way seems better to me to have her take an individual plate to each place and then retrace her steps to the kitchen and back to proffer the serving dish to each one. In both ways I have described, are the implements put on the plate with the dessert.

Answer: Having the dessert placed in front of you is an entirely proper as well as friendly service, and one that is just as conventional as having the hot carver at table. Moreover, it is very good training for your children who are given an opportunity to see how to cut into, and take helpings from every possible variety of dessert, so that when they go to lunch or dine in houses where the dishes are presented to them individually they will feel perfectly at ease in helping themselves. Having the dessert or any other courses of food put on plates in the kitchen is properly not from choice except when the portions are individual ones. In any case, however, the dessert implements should be put at the places when the table is set because it would not do to add them to a dessert plate on which there is food—except a buffet.

Dear Mrs. Post: After the lady of honor at my husband's right is served, is it permissible for the maid to serve each one in turn around the table, or is she supposed to serve the ladies first and then the gentlemen? And even though your answer is that it is permissible to serve in turn when there is only one maid alone, what is correct?

Answer: Correctly, when the waitress has served the lady on the host's right, she continues as people come, whether they are ladies or gentlemen, all the way round the table to the right, and comes to the host last. In some houses every course follows this same procedure, but in others it is thought more courteous to have the second dish presented to the lady on the host's left and passed around the table to the left. This alternating procedure is followed through the meal, in order to make the lady second in honor or receive a few untouched dishes. In other words, if you have five courses, the lady on your husband's right receives three and the lady on his left two. Of course, let's say the first dish is a canape or a fruit cocktail and the second lobster, then both dishes would be given to the lady on the right first.

willful but overworked. There are many shortcuts which must be taken to save her steps. One detail I have in mind especially now, is the best way to serve dessert in our house? Would you suggest having it served on the individual plates from the kitchen or having her put down the serving dish and plates at the place? Either way seems better to me to have her take an individual plate to each place and then retrace her steps to the kitchen and back to proffer the serving dish to each one. In both ways I have described, are the implements put on the plate with the dessert.

Appleton Man Figures

In Story of Heroism

An Appleton man, Earl Gainer, son of Mrs. Emil Schultze, 525 W. College avenue, figures in a story of heroism that comes from the Hawaiian islands, where he is stationed at Ft. Shafter, Honolulu. Last week, when Private G. Gerhardt, 19, and Earl Sinclair, 22, both of G Battery, 64th coast artillery, were diving for coral at Kaula, they were swept out to sea by a strong undertow. Gerhardt held Sinclair aloft until two army life guards, John Wilson and Earl Gainer of K Battery, 64th coast artillery, swam out and assisted them to shore.

Wilson and the Appleton boy risked their own lives to swim 600 yards through treacherous waters to reach the endangered men.

The men and camels in the picture were painted separately and stand out against a background of desert and night sky. The work was done by Peter Giovanni, art instructor at the school.

Children Often Do Things Because They Shouldn't

"No, no. Bitsey doesn't want coffee. Babies don't have coffee. Babies have milk."
"Bitsey wants coffee like grandma."
"Oh, give her a little, just color her milk to please her," says grandma. "No, no," says mother firmly. "No coffee for babies."
Later in the day, when sister Helen, aged nine, comes home from school she has a sandwich and apple while her mother has tea. The meal finished the child says, "Can I have a cigarette, mother?"
"Nonsense! Who ever heard of a little girl having a cigarette? Little girls don't smoke. Smoking isn't for infants like you. Go along now and play on the Circle with the other little girls."

Mother was right, of course. Bitsey does not need coffee and Helen does not need the cigarette. But both of them kept right on wanting what they wanted and to their disappointed minds was added another feeling. They disliked their station in life, fretted at the degree of growth they had attained and longed for the time to come when they could be grown up and do what grown up people did and had so much fun doing.

Some of that feeling is necessary. A child must long to grow up because that longing will help him to do so, but it seems to me that he ought to have a finer incentive for growth than the hope of taking on the less valuable characteristics of maturity. I have come to feel that the girls and boys of adolescent growth do some harmful things simply because for years and years they have been told, "Little boys and girls don't do that." Their inference is, "Big ones can, and do, so I'll hurry up to be big so that I can have fun."

It might be better to change the emphasis a little. I would like to try the effect of saying, "Only older people do that," and accent the oldness. Being old rarely attracts children. They are clever enough to

The Characters

Nina, a nice girl with flaxen hair, has fallen in love with her stepfather.

Richard, the charming, well-tailored stepfather, is openly attentive to Nina.

Honey, Nina's gay, plump, youthful mother, is crazy about Richard, her new husband.

David, a young auto salesman, adores Nina and has urged her to marry him.

Chapter 16

HONEY was still looking anxious, so Nina asked: "Darling, don't you feel well?"

Her mother gave a little laugh. "It didn't sound quite like her, somehow."

"It's probably naughty of me to say this to you, baby, but being married--just newly married--to Richard does not tend to make one feel exactly... placid. Sometimes, I feel a trifle worn out."

She blushed at herself and looked more natural. "It will pass... though I hope not!"

Nina felt a stirring in her breast. She knew it for what it was--jealousy; but she tried to tell herself that it was concern for Honey. Horrible state of affairs!

But the next time she heard of it, it was all settled.

Honey was going to Palm Beach with Horseshoe in a week and Richard--was not.

Nina's knees almost sagged beneath her as she heard the news; but in a moment she felt better, for Honey went on.

"Richard's had a marvelous invitation to fly up to Canada and go on a month's hunting trip. So what with everyone telling me that I'm looking more like a hag every minute... and this opportunity for him, coming at the same time, it seemed like a sensible decision to make."

Richard said: "I didn't want to accept, naturally, and leave my small bride at home... but since..."

Nina cut in. She had to ask one question, quickly.

Bauer Gives Brilliant Performance; Explains Music to His Audience

BY NELL CHAMBERLAIN

ASSUMING the role of teacher and guide rather than that of impersonal performer, Harold Bauer, pianist, not only entertained his audience at Lawrence chapel last night but gave it some understanding and appreciation of the music he played through informal explanations and discussions of the various selections. Perhaps it was because he knew that many of his listeners were music students that he took the trouble to point out a few facts intended to give some background for the music, but the brief talks were infinitely helpful to many others who can better appreciate that about which they know something.

Mrs. Olive Werner entertained at a miscellaneous shower and bridge party Friday night at her home at 619 W. perfection as of the enjoyment he had in his playing and his desire to share that enjoyment with others. Unassuming and entirely lacking in what is generally known as showmanship, he gave the impression of a beloved mentor performing for his pupils. His personality, for there is nothing of the long-haired "artiste" about him.

Rapt attention was his throughout the entire program which included enough familiar music to be of general appeal. Especially pleasing to the audience were Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" and "The Sunken Cathedral" by Debussy, the latter a descriptive piece which gave full play to the imagination.

Bauer's first selections, a set of pieces by Handel which the pianist himself arranged, since Handel's original compositions were for the harpsichord, gave him the opportunity of demonstrating his versatility. The "Overture" was powerful and full of strength, "Allemande," originally a German dance, was light and quick, showing the artist's agility on the keyboard, and "Sara-bande" changed the mood with its slow, measured tempo.

Bright and tripping was "Courante" and "Pavane" combined a lovely melody with brilliant technique. The latter showed some excellent fingering. The group concluded with "Air with Variations," also known as "The Harmonious Blacksmith."

Short dances expressing the two sides of the composer's nature as evidenced in a vivid manner in "Papillons" by Schumann, and "Rhapsody in E Flat" by Brahms was full of vigor and strength.

The closing number, "Scherzo in C sharp minor" by Chopin was a fitting conclusion to the evening. A dramatic piece, it was characterized by crashing chords, lively tempo and swelling crescendos which Bauer handled with ease. He responded to continued applause by playing "The Butterfly Study" by Chopin which was lilting and charming, giving just the right touch to round out the program.

MENASHA — Menasha High school cagers overpowered Clintonville by a 43 to 14 score last night at the Butte des Morts gym before a crowd of 200 people. The game was the conference opener for Menasha and the second conference defeat for Clintonville.

Big Henry Landskron led the Menasha attack by driving in for six field goals, all from under the basket. Nass scored half of Clintonville's 14 points on three baskets and a free throw.

Coach N. A. Calder substituted freely throughout the game using 11 men. Menasha scored most of its points during the second and third quarters, totaling 28 in those periods. Landskron, Resch and DuCharme were the mainstays during that rally with Knoll, Zelinski, Osiewalski and Block working in at the other two positions.

The combination was fast and drove in for close shots. Ball hawks, they stole the ball from Clintonville several times. Their only handicap is lack of size.

Defense weak. The score does not picture the Bluejays' strength accurately for the defense was weaker than Clintonville's 14 points indicates. The Four-Wheel Drive lads drove in for numerous shots but were way off in their shooting. Clintonville made six of 14 gift shots.

Menasha likewise was inaccurate in its shooting, particularly in the second quarter when they peppered the basket with over a dozen shots from short range without sinking one. From the free throw line they sank five while missing eight attempts.

Block opened the scoring with a short push shot after Heide had missed two free throws. Nass dropped in a basket for Clintonville to tie the score, but the Menasha procession started after that. Two baskets by Schneider and one by Landskron made the score 8 to 2 at the first quarter.

Landskron broke through for three baskets in the second quarter which ended 21 to 6 for Menasha. The lead was lengthened to 36 to 9 at the end of the third quarter with the scoring well divided.

Kaukauna High School Cagers in Practice Victory Over Appleton

BY BILL DOWLING

KAUKAUNA — Coach Paul E. Little's Kaukauna High school cagers flashed their best form of the practice season here yesterday afternoon at the high school gymnasium to edge out the Appleton Terrors, 20 to 19, in a hotly contested scrimmage. The Kaw regulars were withdrawn at the end of the regulation game and the Terrors then rolled up 18 points while holding the Kaws to a single free throw. Appleton led 4 to 2 at the end of the first quarter, 7 to 4 at the half, and 17 to 14 at the last six minute period opened, but two quick buckets by Cliff Vanevenhoven put the Kaws on top in the last quarter ended.

Starting Lineup
The Terrors took the floor with a starting lineup having Bowers and Powers at forwards, Besch at center, and Bob and Jim Bailey at the guards. This quintet played as a unit until the middle of the third quarter when Bergner replaced Bowers.

Cliff Vanevenhoven and Bill Peterson at the forward posts, Leland Lambie and Carl Giordana in the back court, and Bill Alger at center played the entire 24 minutes for Kaukauna.

The Kaws were plainly nervous as the game opened, and with the Terrors off in their shooting, it was not until more than five minutes had passed that Besch caged a short bucket for the game's first score. Another by Bob Bailey while the Kaws had to be content with Peterson's lone one gave the Terrors their 4-2 edge at the start of the second quarter.

Besch added two more baskets for Appleton in the second period and Vanevenhoven and Lambie contributed baskets and Alger a free throw for Kaukauna.

Besch High Point Man
Bowers, Bergner and Besch scored for the Terrors in the third quarter, while Peterson connected twice and Alger once for the Kaws. In the last period Powers made Appleton's only bucket as Vanevenhoven sank two and Peterson added two gift shots for the Kaws.

Besch's eight points on four baskets led the Terrors, while Powers, Bob Bailey, Bergner and Bowers each scored once. Bill Peterson's three baskets and three free throws for nine points led both teams.

Against the Kaw second and third strings Fred Oliver pushed through four counters, and Powers, Besch, Bob Bailey, Rogers and Morris all counted once.

Most of Kaukauna's scores came as a result of quick breaks after Terror misplayers, with the Terrors playing a slower game, the Kaw defense always being set.

In addition to the starting lineup Little used Meitner, Grogan, Biseix, Bloch, Pendergast and McCarty. Those who saw action for Appleton were Rogers, Powers, Ahrens, Besch, Bob Bailey, Jim Bailey, Thompson, Morris, Oliver, Bergner and Bowers.

State H. S. Basketball Tourney Dates Will be March 29-April 1

MARINETTE — The Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic association's board of control announced today the 1938 state high school basketball tournament would be held in the University of Wisconsin fieldhouse March 29-April 1.

There will be competition among teams in Classes A, B and C. The number of Class A teams will not be determined until after next March 15.

In Class B, eight teams, winners of qualifying games between district meet champions, will participate. The qualifying games will be played March 17, 18, and 19 in connection with the eight Class C regional tourneys.

The eight winners of the regional meets will compete in the Class C state contests.

Enrollments representing schools will compete in Class A. Class B teams will come from schools with enrollments of 201 to 200, and Class C aggregations from institutions with fewer than 200 pupils.

Class B teams are divided among 16 districts, Class C among 32. District tournaments will be held for Class B teams March 9-12, and for Class C teams 2-5.

In its latest bulletin, the WIAA said: "Class A schools will not be required to participate in district meets or elimination games if they are members of a conference, but in whole or in part a membership of schools with enrollments of more than 800. If not members of such a conference, other provision is made for direct admittance to the state meet."

"Each conference may designate its selection for the state meet. Such selection must be reported to the WIAA by the officers of each conference before March 16, 1938. Failure to so notify will automatically eliminate from participation in the 1938 state tournament."

The following conferences each are entitled to two representatives in the state tournament: Fox River Valley conference; Milwaukee City conference; Milwaukee Suburban conference; Southern Wisconsin conference; and the Wisconsin Valley conference.

"Three Class A schools, located in the western and northwestern sections of the state, are so situated that they are not members of a conference," the WIAA bulletin said. "These three schools represent a large territory."

In order to make the Class A state meet representative of the entire state, the board of control has decided to allot one place in the Class A meet to Superior Central as representing northwestern Wisconsin and to have western Wisconsin represented by either Eau Claire or La Crosse Central.

These schools could arrange for home and home games with the regular season and if they broke even, they could arrange with the winner eligible for the state meet. The selection of one of these teams would be up to the two schools entirely, including method or plan of determination."

Krueger then followed with a difficult shot and immediately after Kupsh, was fouled by Vanden Boogaard. The score then was 4 to 1 for the Papermakers. La Berge was fouled by Thiel and his shot made the score 5 to 1 in Kimberly's favor as the quarter ended.

The second quarter saw Barrand, Krueger, Van Dyke, and Vanden Boogaard make shots while Krueger added a try on a foul by Dingeldine to make the score 14 to 1 at the half for the Papermakers.

In announcing West Virginia's acceptance of an invitation to meet Texas Tech on New Year's day in El Paso, Tex., Chairman R. B. Hoan, Jr., of the Sun Bowl committee, hailed the Mountaineers as "the outstanding state university team of the east."

squad failed to take hold the rest of the game before the onslaughts of a well-manned, experienced Indian team.

The Stacymen were badly outscored every quarter and in the final period, when Coach Dilts sent in all reserves, the Indians tallied six points to New London's five.

Mesnick, New London center, left the game on fouls shortly after the half period and Bernie Stern was lost in the middle of the last quarter. Don Stern took the center position in time to score a bucket and Lee Smith in five minutes sank three out of four free throws.

Bernie Stern and Mesnick worked hard for the Red and White but they and the rest of the quietest appeared off color on the strange floor. Shawano controlled the ball a large part of the time and when the Stacymen did get a shot, they never made it. Douglas "Spook" Hoier failed to show his full ability though he earned the most points with two baskets and two gift shots. Stern dumped two buckets amid difficulties.

Two Score 12 Points

Al MacPhearson and Billy Reed dominated the opposing play with the former copping 12 points, 8 on free throws. He missed only two. His speed and accuracy were outstanding. Billy Reed, sophomore brother of John Reed, played a clever game and got around New London's zone defense for four buckets, caging every one of three gift shots besides.

On the whole the New London team missed eight out of fourteen free throws while MacPhearson's two were the only missed by Shawano out of 18. The score at the half was 18 to 8, and 28 to 11 at the end of the third period.

Taking the floor for Shawano at the fourth quarter were Ramlow, Hartman, O. Meyer, J. Conder and Lawton.

Neenah led 10 to 8 at the quarter and was in front 13 to 11 at the half. In the third stanza the Black Panthers went in front 21 to 18 but Neenah continued to drive hard and Dupont's free throw on Berken's fourth personal and H. Hesselman's basket brought the invaders back into the game and tied the score.

Menasha St. Mary Drops Close Game at Manitowoc

MANITOWOC—St. Mary high school cagers forced Manitowoc into an overtime period here last night before dropping a 22 to 18 decision in the first game of the season for the Zephyrs. Baskets by Schmidt and Klumfayer in the overtime period after the regulation game had ended at 18-all gave the Ship Builders the victory.

St. Mary built up a lead in the second and third quarters but fell behind when Prunuski, tall center, went out of the game at the close of the third quarter on his fourth personal foul. Prunuski, the tallest man on the St. Mary team, controlled the rebounds and after he was ousted, Manitowoc kept control of the ball. Prunuski scored three field goals before committing his fourth personal.

The first quarter ended with the score at 4-all. St. Mary went into the lead during the second quarter which ended with the Zephyrs holding a three point advantage, 10 to 7.

Durability Is Feature of 1937 All-America Eleven

BY ALAN GOULD

NEW YORK—(AP)—In an era of football specialists, developed to handle the growing complexities of America's most spectacular college sport, it is noteworthy that the 1937 All-America team, announced today, emphasizes the part that iron men have played in one of the most stamina-testing seasons on record.

Shock troops and specialists still figure prominently in the maneuvers of the nation's foremost aggregations of gridiron talent. Many played vital roles this year by coming through in emergencies, but the all-star spotlight shines brightest on the boys who not only stood the gauntlet by going the 60-minute route when needed but who also scaled their greatest heights of achievement under pressure.

This is not surprising that country-wide reports, forming the basis for the 13th annual Associated Press All-America selections, stressed durability in "major-league" competition, together with essential all-around qualifications. The fact that more colleges throughout the U. S. are playing exclusively in their own class of competition, rather than interspersing breathers through their schedules, has put greater premium on stamina.

This year's All-America team is equipped to go the route, with a rugged line averaging around 200 pounds per man from end to end, and a backfield quartet

Typewriter Will Make Attractive Christmas Gift

E. W. Shannon Co. Has Corona, Underwood Lines Plus Other Gifts

Jolly old Santa Claus is about to make his annual visit, reminds the E. W. Shannon Co., 300 E. College avenue. Soon you must tell him what to bring your family, your friends and perhaps yourself. Have you puzzled over this problem? Are you undecided? Well, you can stop worrying. What ever one wants this year is a splendid, serviceable, durable 1938 Pacemaker

Speed model Corona portable typewriter. Students from five years of age through high school and college need Coronas because they help them get better marks. Corona instills habits of accuracy, neatness and correct thinking. To keep up with other students your children should have a Corona. And remember that in after life, ability to type is a great asset. Adults want Coronas too. Writers, housewives, business men, teachers, travelers—in fact, every one wants a Corona! Corona's 1938 Pacemaker speed models are among the finest, most up-to-date, most durable, portable typewriters ever made. They have a touch selector (adjust the touch yourself, as light or heavy as you wish); floating shift (you don't have to lift the carriage when you want to write capital letters); speed booster and dozens of other features. And price? It depends upon what you want to pay. There are

Christmas morning, also the endless enjoyment in learning to play this instrument. At least a Christmas gift that lasts forever—MUSIC. Van Zeeland's have found that 9 out of 10 children enjoy music and would like to learn to play. They have also proven that this large majority CAN learn to play through their new modern methods of instruction. The merits derived from our various groups are proved by the fact that the loss of students throughout Van Zeeland's entire enrollment is less than 1 per cent. The Van Zeeland Music Company is planning to make this your happiest Christmas by giving you instruments of the finest quality and the lowest possible prices, at the easiest terms we have ever offered. Only a small down-payment now will enroll your child for a course of lessons in the 1938 term, and enables you to use the instrument as a Christmas Gift. Remember that all great musicians were at one time students, so join now with the fastest growing musical organization in the state—or a card of inquiry will incur no obligation.

Coolerator Will Make Ideal Gift This Christmas

Lutz Ice Co. Tells Advantages of Conditioned Refrigeration

A Christmas gift suggestion for yourself and family worthy of your careful consideration is that which is being made by the Lutz Ice Company, namely, a beautiful new Coolerator which is claimed by many to be the last word in refrigeration. The Lutz Ice firm not only invites you to give yourself modern refrigeration this Christmas in the form of a new Coolerator but also makes the attractive offer of a ten day free trial of the model of your choice.

More than 350,000 families are enjoying the extra advantages of a real air-conditioned Coolerator. You can join them if you wish and the price you pay is about $100 less than you'd expect to pay for such a modern, attractive looking refrigerator. But of most importance is what Coolerator will do for you which makes it the buy of the year. By trying a model in your home on a free ten day trial offer you can see for yourself how it uses ice in a totally different way. . . . how its patented air-conditioning chamber makes foods taste better and last longer. . . . and how you get plenty of ice cubes in only five minutes.

as in the past, with inherent intellectual honesty and lack of political or other chicanery. As with its "blue-print," these predictions are objected to by many people which is to be expected. Conditioned as we have been by tradition and economic lullabies, it is natural that anything that ends to disturb our hitherto trusted and worshipped foundations and molecular existence should provoke emotional resistance. But Technology is no respecter of persons, position, tradition, or institutions and Technocracy, reading the handwriting on the wall, "Mene, mene, Tekel Upharsin" is content to meet the situation as it does and, knowing what it does, is confident that within the very near future a sufficient number of people from all walks of life will learn through pressure of events that a scientifically controlled system of production and distribution is endemic to the North American Continent, with its resources and advanced Technology, and shall govern themselves accordingly. Technocracy is the newest branch of science, the science of Social Engineering. It borrows nothing from any imported political philosophy, "rightist," "leftist," or "in-betweenist," and knows, as seemingly no other institution knows, that Europe to-day is farther away from us than when Columbus landed here in 1492 and that neither the New Dealism of the British Empire, the Nazi-ism of Germany, the Fascism of Italy, or Orient-dominated Communism of Russia can or will work here. Producing artificial shortages, work relief, unemployment insurance, etc., etc., has settled nothing and will not, either will throwing rocks at policemen, or the use of riot guns and tear gas on strikers. Technology has written across the face of the price system, "Mene, mene, Tekel Upharsin" on the North American Continent. Technocracy salutes the New America.

Trace Growth and Development of Technocracy; Local Group Active

The organization known as Technocracy, Inc. with continental headquarters in New York City was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York in the spring of 1933 as a non-profit institution and to function primarily as an educational body. Quoting from its certificate of incorporation, "The purpose of the organization is to promote the exchange of ideas among its members, research and study of social and economic conditions. The said objects are to be conducted without pecuniary profit." Mr. Howard Scott, engineer and lecturer, is its Director-in-Chief and prominent scientists and technicians make up its Board of Governors. It has continued to function as originally provided and at the present time has official organizations, such as in Appleton, thirty-eight states and the western provinces of Canada. Besides it has members-at-large throughout the North American continent from the Arctic circle to the Canal zone. Because of premature publicity in 1932 and 1933, many people believe that the movement had its origin at that time, but such is not the case. The original organization known as the Technical Alliance of North America had its inception in 1921. Numbering among its members men such as Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, with Mr. Howard Scott as Chief Engineer. As long ago as that year it was predicted by the Alliance that this country would encounter a major economic collapse by the spring of 1930, and of such severity that complete recovery therefrom would be extremely doubtful. The market obligingly broke in the fall of 1929 so the prediction missed by six months. Again, in 1932, it was predicted that the banks of this country would close in April 1933. This prediction also missed—by less than thirty days—as the bank holiday started on March 6.

In Appleton the Section known as Section 2, Regional Division 6844, has been functioning since the spring of 1934 and, from early in 1935, has held weekly meetings each without cessation. These Monday night meetings have been held and still are open to the interested public. At this time and for an indefinite period such meetings are held in Room "D" on the second floor of the Appleton Y. M. C. A. Locally as elsewhere Technocracy, Inc. offers to the public an introduction to all branches of science, technology, biology, physics, psychology, etc. In addition it continues to analyze factually and quantitatively the antics of our Price System and to make its predictions

If it's your firm offers you the famous Benjamin Moore line of quality paint, Nehls' skilled staff, of course, offers the best solution for using these superior paints and wallpapers in the most workmanlike manner. Whether you choose to do the work yourself or have it done for you you can be sure of getting the best at the right prices if you shop at Nehls'. You may, for example be able to buy paints for a few cents less, elsewhere, but you will find that Nehls' products go farther, require fewer coats, last longer, and actually cost you less. Now is the ideal time to do your wallpapering and painting and, consequently, have your house looking spic and span with bright new wallpaper or paint greeting holiday guests who will perhaps be visiting you at Christmas time.
